Labor Action Is Delayed For a Week By Senate

President to Outline National Policy in Message to Congress And Fireside Chat

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Congress yesterday suspended action on war labor measures for at least a week to permit the President to lay down a national policy covering all living cost factors, including labor.

The President's program, expected to be of a general administrative nature, not requiring immediate legislation, will be presented to Congress in a special message, and later to the Nation in a fireside chat.

Informed by Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, that the message would be ready by next Monday, the Senate at his request postponed until April 28 any move to call up the Connally plant-seizure bill, key to Senate labor action.

President Needs More Time

Earlier Connally, with Vice President Wallace, Speaker Sam Rayburn and House Majority Leader John McCormack, were advised by the President of his wish for postponement and his tentative plans for controlling the cost of living. The President made clear to his leaders that he preferred the latter term to "inflation."

A rough draft of the message already has been completed, but the President indicated he required more time to work out all of the details, reach further decisions and present his conclusions to Congress.

It was reliably reported that rigid ceilings on wages are "out," along with the program of steep new "anti-inflationary" taxes and induced savings originally advocated by Price Administrator Leon Henderson and Chairman Marriner Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board.

Wage Control Policy Expected

Hand in hand with a general ceiling on prices, promulgated under existing price powers, a wage control policy is expected to be laid down that would make allowances for living cost adjustments. The latter may be administered by the present war labor machinery, in line with wage policies outlined in the War Labor Board's recent International Harvester Co. decision.

War profits would be reached by a tight program of excess-profits taxation and by renegotiation of war contracts where profits were excessively heavy. Statutory authority for contract renegotiation is provided in the conference compromise on the 19½-billion-dollar supple-

Three Brewster Plane Plants Seized by U. S.

The Government seized control yesterday of three plants of the Brewster Aeronautical Corporation, makers of warplanes, and White House officials said the reason was "dissatisfaction with the management."

President Roosevelt ordered the Navy to take possession and operation of the plants at Long Island City, N. Y., Newark, N. J., and Johnsville, Pa., a few days after Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, had complained of slowdowns in plants with naval war contracts.

Byrd, in an announcement last week, said the Navy had given him a list of eight plants where slowdowns existed, including the Brewster plant at Long Island City.

He said the Brewster plant had been described to him by the Navy as follows:

"This plant is operating at 40 per cent of capacity due to labor leaders' demands for slowdown, and also because of inefficient management. It is reported that in several sections of the plant all of the employes, including the foremen, are enemy aliens."

The complaint concerning Aliens also had been voiced by a union leader, R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers of America (C. I. O.), which has an aviation workers' affiliate. Thomas, after a visit to the White House to talk about Byrd's charges of slowdowns, told reporters, in mentioning the Long Island plant, that a "large cross-section of the management are aliens" and that the union had asked the FBI to investigate.

In announcing that the Government had taken over the plants, Stephen Early, Presidential secretary, said only that it was because of dissatisfaction with the management, adding that "I don't think there is any labor trouble."

A Navy Department statement on the action said the corporation had contracts for combat planes, "the orderly and regular delivery of which is essential to the war effort. The existing private control

Rep. Hoffman Asks House Probe His Charges of 'Smear'

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

Representative Clare E. Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, yesterday sought a Congressional investigation of what he alleges was an attempt to "smear" him after he went to be questioned by a special grand jury on Axis agents.

In a speech on the floor of the House he asked Speaker Sam Rayburn to appoint a committee to determine:

1. Whether Special Attorney William Power Maloney is making an effort to defeat Congressmen who were isolationists before Pearl Harbor.

2. If a reporter for The Washington Post has obtained access to grand jury records "in some unauthorized way."

There was no immediate indication that such an investigation would be undertaken.

Asks Committee Study Case

"The Speaker should appoint a committee to call before it Sepcial Attorney Maloney, reporters for The Washington Post and the grand jury investigators and ascertain whether or not the present investigation is not being conducted as a smear campaign in an effort to defeat all those who prior to December 7 might have been considered as isolationist," Hoffman declared.

"Such a committee should inquire as to whether the special attorney himself did not, when seeking the extension of life of the grand jury, make the statement that if he were given three additional months he could defeat every Republican for Congress who had been opposed to our entry into war.

"Source" Denies It

"Also I suggest that the committee investigate and determine whether the proceedings of the grand jury had been secret, as required by law, and whether a reporter for The Washington Post had not, in some unauthorized way, obtained access to the grand jury records."

When Hoffman charged last week on the floor that he was being "smeared" because of his isolationist activities, Majority Leader McCormick demanded the authorization for his statement. Hoffman said at the time that it was an

Jurors Act as U. S. Formally Bars Mails To 'Social Justice'

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The editor and Washington representative of Charles E. Coughlin's magazine, Social Justice, which Attorney General Biddle branded "clearly seditious," were ordered yesterday to appear before the special grand jury on Axis agents on Thursday.

Meanwhile, Postmaster General Frank C. Walker formally barred the April 20 issue of the magazine from the mails, pending a hearing, set for April 29, on final revocation of its second class mailing privilege.

Those summoned were:

E. Perrin Schwartz, nominal editor of Social Justice.

Louis B. Ward, Carroll Arms Hotel, Washington, D. C., who has represented Coughlin here and who was an unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination for Senator in the 1936 Michigan primaries.

The grand jurors did not summon Coughlin. The three special prosecutors conducting the investigation of defeatist publications and organizations ignored a statement he issued yesterday, which said:

"It is not necessary for the Federal grand jury to take several months, or even days, for determining 'all those responsible' for Social Justice.

"Time and again I have said, and here repeat, that I am neither the editor, publisher, nor owner of Social Justice magazine. However, I do here and now publicly state, that I, Father Charles E. Coughlin, pastor of the Shrine of the Little Flower, alone am responsible for, and do control the magazine, its policies and contents. This sole

GOP Opposes Postwar Isolationism

National Committee Also Pledges Fight To Victory; Willkie Triumph Is Seen

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 20.—The Republican National Committee tonight demanded that the Nation prosecute an offensive, uncompromising war until peace with victory is attained and declared that the United States should assist in bringing about cooperation among the countries of the world in the post-war era.

A resolution embodying those sentiments was approved by the committee at its first meeting since Pearl Harbor, and Wendell Willkie, the party's 1940 Presidential nominee, commented quickly that it represented an "abandonment of isolationism."

Walter S. Hallanan, of West Virginia, who presented Willkie's proposals for a stand against isolation to the committee, contended that the pronouncement was a victory for Willkie.

Pertinent paragraphs in the statement indorsed by the committee were these:

"We demand the prosecution of an offensive war, relentlessly and without reservation, whatever it may cost in wealth, energy and human life, until the United States and its Allies have won a complete victory over their enemies.

"There Shall Be No Compromise"

"We will recognize no peace with those enemies except PEACE WITH VICTORY and we will never entertain any proposals of peace until such victory be won. There shall be no appeasement or compromise.

"We realize that after this war the responsibility of the Nation will not be circumscribed within the territorial limits of the United States; that our Nation has an obligation to assist in the bringing about of an understanding, comity and cooperation among the nations of the world in order that our own liberty may be preserved and that the blighting and destructive processes of war may not again be forced upon us and upon the free and peace-loving peoples of the earth."

The statement, as brought out of the resolutions committee, incorporated points and, in some passages, the language of proposals offered by Willkie, Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio and Senator Wayland Brooks, of Illinois. All espoused a full-force war but Willkie also advocated approval of an active role for the United States in world affairs.

"Great Mistake" Says T

"I think it is a great mistake for the National Committe to have expressed any policy at all on post-war action," Taft stated.

"But the committee has drawn the teeth of the Willkie proposal so that no one can take exception to the language employed."

Future Rests With Germany, Laval Asserts; Russians Down 1500 Nazi Planes in 6 Weeks

Raid on Murmansk Smashed With Heavy Losses; Smolensk Under Soviet Guns

By the Associated Press

London, April 20.—Soviet pilots and ground batteries destroyed 1500 German planes in the six weeks ending April 14 to amass one of the biggest scores of the air war, the Moscow radio announced tonight.

The reported bag was remarkable in itself but all the more so because 1000 of the Nazi craft were declared knocked out during March alone, when blizzards caused some of the worst flying weather encountered by Red airmen.

Aerial warfare has exploded in the far north with the Soviet air force smashing heavy Nazi assaults upon the Red northern fleet, the Russians announced.

Fifteen Downed at Murmansk

Other accounts from the front said the Red air force smashed a German air assault on Murmansk, shooting down 15 of the raiders. Only one attacking plane broke through to that Arctic port of entry for United States supplies and it failed to do any damage, the Russians said.

In still another German raid, 8 of 18 attacking craft were reported downed over an undisclosed place in the Crimea, at the southern end of the front.

The biggest news from the Eastern Front was the report that the Russian army of the center had drawn its big guns up to within range of Smolensk, center of German military power, about 230 miles west of Moscow, while northern Russian forces were violently assaulting the main German and Finnish lines about Leningrad.

Seventeen Strongholds Taken

Kuibyshev dispatches received here said Red army units on the Leningrad front captured 17 strongholds in administering a shattering defeat to the 217th German Division.

The Russian attacks in the north, apparently a supreme effort to relieve the second city of the Soviet Union before the spring thaw becomes general, were loosed along the Volkhov River south of Leningrad and against the Finnish lines on the Svir River and on the Karelian Isthmus.

The Germans, said unofficial advices received here, were hurling every ounce of their strength into the struggle in an effort to hold on at any cost until the ice in the Volkhov melts and it becomes again a wide fluid barrier to protect the German flank and rear.

Guerillas Active

A supplement to the midnight communique reported the capture of an important point of resistance on the Central Front, where the Germans were reported throwing in reserves brought up from the deep rear. In two days of fighting in that

U. S. Sub Intercepts, Torpedoes Japanese Sub in Unusual Battle

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Navy disclosed last night that one of its submarines had torpedoed and damaged an enemy submarine in the Pacific while the American craft was en route home from a successful raid into Japanese home waters.

News of the unusual engagement was given in an announcement of the award of the Navy Cross to the commander of the undersea craft, Lieut. Comdr. Elton W. Grenfell and of the similar decoration of three other American submarine commanders.

Together, the four United States submersibles sank six Japanese vessels totaling 45,000 tons. Loss of the ships had been announced previously in Navy communiques.

"All but the submarine were attacked in Japanese waters, and in all but that instance the attacks were driven home in the face of intensive enemy air and surface patrols," the Navy declared.

"Only one of our submarines was damaged—that damage slight—while there was no injury to personnel."

Commander Grenfell's vessel was en route to its base after sinking a 5000-ton Jap ship, when he received information that enemy submarines were nearby.

Continuous Attack

Heavy and continuous pounding of Corregidor by big Jap siege guns and recurrent attacks by dive-bombers brought from the War Department last night a statement that "some casualties and some damage" had been done to the island citadel.

A determined new bid to knock out the Manila Bay forts and gain control of the strategically important Philippine harbor was opened by the enemy Sunday. Since then, batteries of 240-millimeter guns, hurling shells more than 9 inches in diameter, have been hammering the islands, and for the first time Japanese dive bombers assaulted the forts.

Panay Drive Stemmed

Our guns returned the fire, silencing at least three enemy batteries, hitting a Japanese plane and smashing three truck and troop concentrations on Bataan Peninsula.

At the end of two days of the new assault, it appeared that the forts had taken some punishment. Heretofore, the heavy bombing and artillery attacks had done only superficial harm.

Meanwhile, the Japs threw reinforcements into the battle for control of Panay, as the War Department reported that the enemy had been "temporarily halted" by counterattacks of the American-Filipino

British Tanks Lead Attack by Chinese At Yenangyaung

By the Associated Press

London, April 20.—Chinese infantry and British tanks have teamed up in a bold counterattack to score their first offensive success in Burma by driving the Japanese from Yenangyaung in the center of the ruined oil fields by a headlong assault, it was announced today.

British tanks smashed through the jungle ahead of veteran Chinese infantry to erase the most dangerous Japanese penetration in Burma, and the R. A. F. scoured the Arakan coast of West Burma looking for signs that the Japanese were attempting to employ the tactics of Malaya—coastal infiltration toward Akyab, small but only north Burma port behind the British lines.

Tigers Bag Five Planes

Sweeping 200 miles of the coast, the planes not only bombed Bassein airport and Allanmyo on the lower Irrawaddy, but also smashed barges and launches at Bassein and in Gwa Bay, 50 miles to the north. They attacked two schooners at Andrew Bay and Sandoway, 75 miles north of Gwa Bay.

[American Volunteer Group fliers have bagged five more enemy planes over the Burma front, International News Service reported.

[Over North Burma on Monday afternoon they shot down a big Japanes bomber, A. V. G. headquarters at Kunming, South China, announced. This followed an air battle in which A. V. G. pilots downed two twin-motored enemy bombers out of a squadron that raided an A. V. G. base on the frontier between Burma and South China's Yunnan Province

Vichy, April 20.—Pierre Laval, new chief of the Vichy government, announced tonight that "no threats" could prevent him from pursuing a policy of reconciliation toward Germany based on "sincerity of acts," and he bitterly denounced American and British interference in French affairs.

"No threat can keep me from seeking reconciliation with Germany because it is a policy inspired solely by the paramount French interests," Laval said in a radio speech to the nation, his first formal declaration since he returned to power.

Denounces "Interference"

[Laval declared that republican France committed a "crime" in going to war against Germany, the Associated Press reported.

[At about the time of his address the Nazis ordered the execution of 30 more French hostages for the bombing of a German troop train last week; announced that 80 more would be executed if the guilty had not been turned up by Thursday, and ordered 1000 more "Communists, Jews and sympathizers" herded into Eastern Europe.]

Denouncing what he called the interference with French policy by other powers, Laval cried:

"In the past I have never agreed to accept any foreign influence, which explains why Washington is provoked and England is against me and my policy."

(The official text of Laval's speech as received by the United Press from Vichy contained no reference to Washington being "provoked." It apparently was deleted by the French foreign office censorship.)

Promises Better Days

After Laval had spoken, authorities revealed that Admiral Darlan would issue tomorrow his first order of the day to the French fleet.

Laval said a German defeat on the Russian Front would mean a tide of Bolshevism engulfing Europe, with the sanction of Great Britain, and imposing communism on France as well as the rest of the continent.

MacLeish Calls on Press to Balk Axis' 'Peace Offensive'

New York, April 20 (AP).—Archibald MacLeish called upon the Nation's newspapermen today to turn the full power of the American press against an Axis peace offensive which he predicted would be launched this summer.

"A 'peace offensive' is an offensive in political warfare and political warfare is warfare fought with the weapons journalists and publishers are trained to use—the weapons of ideas and words," the director of the Federal Office of Facts and Figures told more than 600 publishers and editors at the forty-second annual luncheon of Associated Press members at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The journalists were stirred to applause by the words of Riley Allen, editor of the Honolulu Star-Bulletin, who said in a message that "we expect to continue publishing an American newspaper in American territory in spite of hell and Hirohito."

Navy Blames Normandie Fire On Workmen's 'Negligence'

The official naval inquiry into the fire which swept the liner Normandie, February 9, has reported that "gross negligence and utter violation of rules of common sense" on the part of employes of a private company was the "direct and sole cause" of the disastrous blaze.

Blame was placed by the court of inquiry on the Robins Dry Dock & Repair Co., of Brooklyn, N. Y., which was engaged in converting the 83,423-ton former French vessel into a troop transport when it burned and capsized in New York harbor.

No evidence of sabotage was found, the naval board declared.

The report, made public last night by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, also declared that a naval officer and a Coast Guard officer had failed to take all possible precautions to guard against such a disaster.

Knox, in his comment approving the findings of the naval court, asserted that the two officers—Lieut. Comdr. Earl G. Brooks, United States Coast Guard, and Lieut. Comdr. Lester C. Scott, United States Naval Reserve—had failed in their duty of insuring the ship's security.

Because of mitigating circumstances, however, Knox announced that "no disciplinary action will be taken at this time" other than to call the report to the attention of any selection board which considers the officers for promotion at some later time.

The Navy Judge Advocate General, Rear Admiral W. B. Woodson, in his comment on the board's finding, noted that while the Navy had contracted with the Robins company for the safe performance of work on the ship, renamed the U. S. S. Lafayette, the "Navy cannot delegate to any private person or corporation the responsibility for the safety of the vessel."

The officers cited, he added, had "a definite and specific military mission to perform in connection with the safety" of the vessel, which had no connection with the civil liability of the company.

Woodson also took occasion to note that "the testimony of the commandant of the Third Naval District (then Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews), who was called as a witnes, consisted principally of a prepared statement."

"No searching inquiries by examination were made as to the details of the function of his office as they related to his duties in connection with the safety and security

Bombing of East Coast Cities By 'Japan's Ally' Held Likely

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, April 20.—The chief of staff for the Third Civilian Defense Region said today it was "altogether likely" the East Coast of the United States would be bombed by an ally of Japan in reprisal for "the bombing of Tokyo and other Japanese cities."

Col. Augustine S. Janeway wrote to civilian defense chiefs in Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia at the direction of Rowland K. Adams, regional director, urging that the area be alerted against the possibility of enemy air attacks.

"With the news of the bombing of Tokyo and other Japanese cities," he wrote, "we believe the people of the East Coast region of America should be more aware than ever of the possibility of the enemy bombing us, too.

"It is altogether likely that Japan's ally will attempt to repay the blow."

The letters were sent to Isaac S. George, executive director, Maryland council of defense; Dr. A. C. Marts, executive director, Pennsylvania council; J. H. Wyse, coordinator, Virginia council, and Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive director, District of Columbia council.

Col. Janeway said the possibility of an immediate raid along the Eastern seaboard led Col. Vincent A. Carroll, commander of the Philadelphia area to order an alert Sat-

Japs Believe Raiders Came From Carrier, Flew On to China

By the Associated Press

The Japanese, apparently still trying to learn how Tokyo and three other of their greatest cities were bombed Saturday, suggested yesterday that planes came from three United States aircraft carriers and then sped on to havens in China.

In raising this possibility, however, the Japanese Imperial headquarters identified the planes as North American B-25's, which are big two-motored Army bombers never known to have been launched from the short flight decks of carriers.

Tending nevertheless to support the Japanese conclusion, the Reuters news agency in London quoted "well-informed quarters" in Chungking as saying United States planes which raided Japan had arrived safely at their destination. Chungking had said previously the raids were not launched from China.

The mystery thickened when, in a later statement, authorities in the Chinese capital said they had no information whatever about the raiders landing in China or anywhere else.

Washington or other capitals of the United Nations were silent as the Japanese accounts continued to contradict themselves and to imply that Japanese "face" and public morale had suffered, in addition to

U. S., Aussie Fliers Bag 40 Jap Planes

MacArthur, Curtin Confer; Offensive Plans Under Way

By the Associated Press

United States Army Headquarters, Australia, April 20.—Destruction of 40 grounded Japanese planes in two weekend raids on Rabaul was reported today as Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Prime Minister John Curtin discussed operations of the Southwest Pacific Command.

The conference, which other Allied war chiefs attended, was described officially only as dealing with a "highly confidential" subject.

[After the session, Curtin announced, according to the United Press:

["Gen. MacArthur and I are in the most complete agreement on general plans for knocking out Japan by a concentration of our strength. Our conceptions of the whole global strategy are identical."]

Early Offensive Indicated

The American general's new command is under instructions to prepare an offensive, and the increasing air attacks on the Japanese footholds on the outer ring of islands possibly presages an early effort to drive the invaders from those bases.

In the attacks Saturday and Sunday on Rabaul, in New Britain, thousands of pounds of explosives were dropped on Lakunai Airdrome, wrecking runways and planes, and on Japanese flying boats in the harbor.

A ship also was reported damaged. The United States and Australian airmen drove through tropical rainstorms and heavy antiaircraft fire to accomplish their mission.

Australian Air Minister Arthur S. Drakeford declared he had "cheering news that numbers of the latest American aircraft will be added to the powers of attack."

[Semiofficial sources, according to the United Press, reported the arrival in Australia of additional troops, planes and equipment from the United States, declaring that this, together with an ever-increasing output in Australian supplies, was "heartening to those charged with the defense of Australia."]

Reports seeping through from Rabaul said that the Japanese were suffering acutely from hunger because their supply ships had been sunk and that Australian captives were in good spirits despite forced labor on the wharves.

Tips Backfired

Brazil Seizes Spy Who Led Spee to Prey

Rio de Janeiro, April 20 (AP).—A German master spy was arrested today and identified as the operator of a radio aboard a harbored German freighter which directed the pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee to the kill of British ships leaving Brazilian ports before the Nazi raider herself was sunk in December, 1939.

The prize catch among 36 Germans rounded up today in the State of Rio Grande Do Sul was Kurt Fraeb, a German officer in the last war and, according to police, the director of espionage in the southern port of Rio Grande since 1938. He was connected with one of the most prominent German firms in Brazil.

Police said he used the radio of the German freighter Montevideo in Rio Grane Harbor to advise the Graf Spee when British ships were departing.

(Although the Brazilian police did not say so, this espionage obviously backfired and led to the final destruction of the raider.)

53 Skiddoo?

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), April 20 (AP).—Adolf Hitler spent his fifty-third birthday directing operations at his Eastern Front headquarters today and received greeting of German children who broadcast their messages on a program in which the bells of Strasbourg Cathedral in Alsace Loraine rang.

The children's broadcast was part of the ceremony of calling 1,000,000 boys and girls into the Hitler youth movement.

Teachers Threatened

London, April 20 (AP).—Maj. Vidkun Quisling, premier of the Nazi puppet government of Norway, has issued an ultimatum to school teachers in the German-occupied country to join his National Party Teachers Association by May 1 or lose their jobs, Reuters reported today quoting the Stockholm newspaper Svenska Dagbladet.

The Swedish press assumed that the effect of the order may be a virtual suspension of education in Norway.

Laval Says Future Lies With Nazis

bracketed Britain and Russia on the other, Laval said the nation's only choice was to play a full role loyally in the "new order" or French civilization would disappear.

"Ever since I have been in public life," he said, "I have affirmed Franco-German reconciliation as a condition of European Peace. For that to succeed, it would have been necessary for France to have an exclusively French policy, shorn of foreign influences which in our history and today keep alive our dissension.

"The policy of entente and reconciliation with Germany must be practiced loyally. To be effective it requires reciprocal confidence. It is only on the sincerity of acts that a durable understanding and reconciliation can be founded."

On the other side of his contention, Laval bitterly denounced Britain.

[Of Britain, he said, according to the Associated Press:

["My thoughts go especially to those among you who have suffered from attacks of a former ally, all the more fierce against our territories because she is incapable of defending her own.

["After having led us to war, after having abandoned us in battle, she tried to destroy our fleet, she killed our sailors and starved our people.

["Today her airplanes are again in French skies; after deserting us in the moment of danger, they would complete the destruction of our homes which battles have left unscathed."]

He promised French workers that "tomorrow labor will be protected, honored, magnified" and said he would restore liberties to agriculture, gradually, but as fast as possible.

"In the new Europe," he said, "socialism will be installed everywhere, taking into consideration the national aspirations and character of all the peoples.

"Since Montoire (where Hitler and Marshal Petain met to inaugurate the collaboration program) the war has spread to all the continents and assumed a new meaning.

"To other reasons to seek an understanding with Germany must be added the more compelling reason: The gigantic war Germany is waging against bolshevism not only has widened the war but revealed its meaning.

"Frenchmen of the empire who hear me tonight in Africa, Asia, the Pacific Islands and America, I feel your emotion and share your anguish in the destinies of the empire.

"French emigres who denounced their motherland with the aid of foreigners did not hesitate to install themselves on certain parts of our soil. To those of you who stay there and continue attached to France, I say, we will never abandon you; you will stay French."

Workmen Blamed In Normandie Fire

of the LaFayette," he added.

The court recommended that proceedings be instituted against the Robins company for damages to the full extent of liability.

One section of the contract, it was brought out, said liability for damages from fire or other causes should not exceed $300,000 but whether that limit would apply specifically in this case was not stated.

In commenting on the responsibility of Commanders Brooks and Scott Knox said:

"The world military situation at the time imposed a most pressing demand for troop transports and the enormity of the expansion of ship construction and conversion resulted in the placing of an extremely heavy burden upon the shoulders of those engaged in readying ships for military service.

Torch Immediate Cause

"As a result, corners had to be cut and responsibility delegated to personnel less experienced and capable than would be the case in normal times."

The fire, the report said, started when life preservers stored in the 60-million-dollar luxury liner's main lounge were ignited by a torch which was being used to remove an ornamental light standard. There were 1160 bales of the preserves and the blaze, it was added, spread as a "grass fire."

The court of inquiry asserted that the Robins company had failed to have extinguishers, connected ready-for-use first hose or even fire watchers at the scene of the blow torch operation.

The training of fire watchers by the Robin company, the court said, "was superficial" and "could not possibly qualify the fire watchers to cary out the necessary precautions to prevent, combat or extinguish fires."

It was further stated that the Coast Guard fire brigade stationed on the ship "had very little training in their duties."

The Coast Guard detachment consisted of six officers and 277 enlisted men under Lieut. Comdr. Brooks.

Simultaneously with the release of the court of inquiry report, Secretary Knox disclosed appointment of a special committee to study the condition of the Normandie and make recommendations with respect to its future usefulness, presumably to say whether the ship could be restored to service or would have to be scrapped.

J. Barstow Smull, of J. H. Winchester & Co., Inc., New York City, was named chairman of the committee. Other members are:

W. A. Gibbs, Gibbs & Cox, New York; Rear Admiral H. S. Howard, of the Navy's Bureau of Ships; H. G. Smith, president of the National Council of American Shipbuilders; A. V. Moore, president of Moore-McCormack Lines, Inc., Ne wYork; Rear Admiral H. L. Vickery, U. S. Maritime Commission; Rear Admiral George H. Rock, retired naval officer and administrator of Webb Institute of Naval Architecture; Prof. H. L. Seward, of Yale Univervan, of the Navy's Bureau of Ships. van, of the Navy's Bureau of Ships.

Hull Warns on Production Lag; Allies Plan to Pool Shipping

FROM LONDON TO WHITE HOUSE—Gen. George C. Marshall (left) has a word with Harry L. Hopkins, lend-lease administrator, at the White House door, Just back from war conferences in London, they lunched with the President yesterday and made their report

Hopkins, Marshall Report to Roosevelt On Visit to Britain

Asserting that an effective shipping pool by the United Nations is imperatively needed if Hitlerism is to be destroyed, Harry Hopkins, close advisor and personal friend of President Roosevelt, revealed after a White House conference yesterday that plans for a "real pooling" of the combined shipping resources of the Allies were now being worked out.

Hopkins and Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the United States Army, both of whom returned Sunday from a trip to England to confer with Britain's leading military authorities, gave a first-hand report at a White House luncheon yesterday to the President on their London mission. The guests also included Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, and John G. Winant, ambassador to Great Britain, who will soon return to London to resume his post after a brief holiday in the United States.

Meeting reporters after the two-and-a-half-hour White House luncheon conference, Hopkins warned: "These enemies of ours should not be underrated. It will take everything we have got to win, and it's going to take same patience on the part of the people. There is work to be done and fighting to be done—guns to be produced and they've got to be fought against the enemy."

The situation in Britain, said Hopkins, who had seen that country seven months previously, was now "tighter and tougher."

"The morale of the British people is excellent," he added.

General Marshall had even less to say to newspapermen on leaving the White House about either his trip to London or his talks with President Roosevelt.

Asked whether there would be any visible action or other important results from his mission to London, Marshall just smiled and said: "Having seen the enlargements on some of my comments in London, I am very cautious now." He said that he had reported to the President on his London mission, but he declined to go into details.

General Marshall said that his journey to London had been "very satisfactory." The trip itself he described as being "uneventful and speedy." As an example of the speed, he said that he had arisen from the dinner table in London at 7:45 o'clock Saturday night and had arrived in New York at 2:45 o'clock on Sunday afternoon.

Secretary of State, Back at His Desk, Predicts Victory

By Joseph Short

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

All people fighting the Axis were importuned by Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday to regard the struggle "as threatening as if his house were on fire."

The tanned, 70-year-old senior Cabinet officer returned to his desk from a two months' rest with a confident statement predicting a United Nation's victory but admonishing that "any lagging in effort" would involve "an incalculable and unnecessary increase in suffering and in losses."

The text of the statement:

"I have observed with keen satisfaction the splendid showing made in the whole war effort of the country during recent months, and particularly in the production of war supplies for the fighting fronts.

Output Exceeds All Hopes

"The greatly expanded volume of output is far larger than was even hoped for the first of the year. This increased production, placed in the hands of our fighting forces, will both hasten and make certain the utter defeat of our enemies.

"The United Nations, of which we are one, will win this war. Victory will come sooner and with a vast saving in suffering, in life and in property, in proportion as every man and woman in this country and in each of the United Nations realizes the extreme danger from the purposes of the worst barbarian leaders in all history, who plan to conquer and brutally subjugate the world by methods of unparalleled savagery.

"Victory will be hastened by every additional ounce of effort which each one of us puts forth in a situation that is as threatening as if his own house were on fire.

"It will be delayed and will involve an incalculable and unnecessary increase in suffering and in losses with any weakening of such realization and with any lagging in effort and exertion.

"I am confident that our Nation and all those who are with us have only watchword: To move forward today—Not tomorrow.

"With this will to victory, free men the world over will triumph over the forces of barbarism."

The Secretary of State, asserting that he was in process of bringing himself up-to-date on all diplomatic matters, told the reporters he had nothing to add to known facts on United States-Vichy French relations.

This Government has recalled Ambassador William D. Leahy "for consultation," as an aftermath of appointment of Pierre Laval, ardent Axis collaborationist, as chief of government and presumably the effective head of the government at Vichy.

ence of the American craft. Grenfell fired three torpedoes, damaging the enemy craft, and went on his way.

The Navy announcement did not indicate the extent of the damage, but navy men here said that even if only one of the torpedoes found its mark, it should have seriously damaged, if not sunk the craft.

One Gets Large Vessel

The other sub commanders awarded Navy Crosses for their exploits were Lieut. Comdr. David C. White, Lieut. Comdr. Lewis S. Parks and Lieut. Comdr. Stanley P. Moseley.

Parks sank a 17,000-ton enemy vessel while undergoing severe bombing depth charge attacks. He sighted the large ship, and while maneuvering into position, Japanese planes and patrol craft discovered his presence.

They immediately let go with bombs and depth charges, but Parks had eyes only for his quarry. He managed to maneuver into position for the attack, opened fire with torpedoes and sent the ship to the bottom.

Although it was injured by the depth charges and bombs, the submarine escaped and made the long trip back to its base without further mishap or any injury to its crew.

Moseley's Craft Got Three

Lieut. Comdr. Moseley made six attacks on enemy ships, sinking three vessels totaling 16,600 tons. He returned from the patrol without damage to his submarine or injury to any of the men aboard.

Lieut Comdr. White torpedoed and sank a 7000-ton Japanese ship. His craft was not damaged despite the fact that 24 depth charges were dropped near his submarine.

Commander Grenfell, a resident of Fairlawn, N. J., was on duty here in the Navy Department prior to taking command of a new submarine in February, 1941. He graduated from the Naval Academy in 1926.

Vichy Ships Given Japs, London Hears

By Frederick Kuh

Copyright by Chicago Sun

London, April 20.—Vichy and Tokyo have negotiated a secret agreement whereby French ships, totaling more than 50,000 tons, have been turned over to Japan for use on Far Eastern routes, according to information received from a reliable source.

Discussions about the arrangement were conducted several weeks ago and indications have reached London that the plan is already operating. There are no signs yet that Vichy is prepared to grant the use of French merchantmen for traffic between Germany and Japan, but the British are watching the possibility of such a development.

It is believed the agreement falls into two parts.

4 Vessels Named

The first concerns the chartering of four French ships to Japan, "exclusively for traffic benefiting Japan," to be operated by Japanese officers and crews and flying the Japanese flag. They are destined for traffic to Manchukuo, Shanghai and other Chinese ports controlled by Japan. Four vessels, it is said, have been leased to Japan for this purpose. They are the 7110-ton Bougainville, the 5795-ton Persea, the 10,086-ton Berndodin and the 9577-ton Lisle.

Vichy reportedly has asked Tokyo to pledge that the ships refrain from carrying troops and war materials, but viewed from London it seems doubtful that Vichy will be able to exercise the slightest supervision, especially over the first four vessels which are manned completely by Japanese.

It is known that Vichy suggested that the agreement be of six months' duration, renewable for another six months and terminable one month after Japan signs a peace treaty with the United States and Great Britain.

In the second part of the agreement, two other vessels are understood to have been chartered to Japan for trade between French Indo-China, Shanghai and Japan. These vessels were to have been the 11,732-ton Marechal Joffre and the 7014-ton Sikiang, and according to the plan they were to remain under the French flag and use French crews, but "their movements would be controlled by the Japanese."

This part of the agreement was upset, however, when the Marechal Joffre is reported to have escaped and reached an Allied base, where the crew voted in favor of joining the Free French movement under Gen. Charles DeGaulle. The Marechal Joffre is now under United States Government control. It is believed, however, that Vichy has given the Japanese another ship in place of the Marechal Joffre and it is now plying between French Indo-China and Japan.

Vichy's shipping deal with Japan is known to the United States and British governments, and must certainly make them alive to the possibility of similar leasing of vessels by France to Germany and Italy. Munitions and perhaps even Axis troops might be sent in this fashion to reinforce the armies of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel in Africa.

State Department Makes Strong Protest

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

The State Department disclosed last night that it already has made a strong protest to the Vichy French government against reported negotiations for use by the Japanese of certain French vessels in Indo-Chinese waters.

Informed by the Chicago Sun of an exclusive dispatch from London that the agreement already had been consummated, a spokesman said that as far as the department knew the matter had not gone beyond the negotiation stage. All the information given out was in response to the Sun's inquiry. No announcement was made.

Text of G. O. P. War Resolution

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 20.—The text of the resolution adopted by the Republican National Committee today follows:

Report of the resolutions committee:

Whereas, the Republican Party from its origin has been dedicated to the cause of human liberty, and has not hesitated to advocate that cause, or to fight for it, even at the cost of human life;

And whereas, an alliance of lawless and godless enemies of our civilization have wrecked free institutions in many parts of the world, have enslaved whole nations, have treacherously attacked the soil of the United States, and are conspiring to overthrow the republic;

And whereas, the people of the United States as other free peoples, who have agreed to call themselves the United Nations, are now engaged in a great war to wipe out those aggressors;

We, the members of the Republican National Committee, assembled in Chicago, April 20, 1942, hereby resolve:

1—We demand the prosecution of an offensive war, relentlessly and without reservation, whatever it may cost in wealth, energy or human life, until the United States and its Allies have won a complete victory over their enemies.

PEACE WITH VICTORY

2—We will recognize no peace with those enemies except PEACE WITH VICTORY, and we will never entertain any proposals of peace until such victory be won. There shall be no appeasement or compromise.

3—We realize that after this war the responsibility of the Nation will not be circumscribed within the territorial limits of the United States; that our Nation has an obligation to assist in the bringing about of an understanding, comity and cooperation among the nations of the world in order that our own liberty may be preserved and that the blighting and destructive processes of war may not again be forced upon us and upon the free and peace-loving peoples of the earth.

4—We pledge to preserve the two-party system, to guarantee the continuance of our present American constitutional form of government and the sacred safeguard provided in our Bill of Rights for ourselves and for future free Americans. We further pledge the preservation of our present system of individual initiative and private enterprise.

5. That through informed and aroused public opinion and through our elected representatives in Congress, we will be a constructive and energetic force in the conduct of the war effort and will urge upon the Administration in power whatever measures seem necessary to that end.

Weed Out the Unfit

6. Specifically we demand (a) the selection of men and women best fitted to do the job, regardless of party affiliation or economic status; and also the weeding out of inappropriate and unfit political appointments throughout the Government's war machinery; (b) the drastic reduction of all nonessential war expenditures and the conservation of the resources of the Nation to the essential and direct purpose of winning the war; (c) the elimination of nonessential domestic regulations and demand the concentration of our minds and manpower against the enemy.

7. That the Republican Party pledges itself to seek and to find a solution for the social and economic problems which trouble this Nation, so that no man or class of men shall be penalized or receive less than is his with justice; that equal and free opportunity shall be granted to all, in order that each may earn the ligitimate reward of security for himself and for his family.

8. We will vigorously oppose any effort by the Administration to use the war emergency as an excuse for the extension in domestic affairs of unsound economic panaceas. We realize that the correction of certain injustices can be made under the pressure of war which years of peaceful effort have failed to bring about, such as, for instance, the discrimination against the Negro citizen in industry, in labor, and in the armed services of the Nation. Such things we do not consider in the realm of social experiment. They are wrongs under the Constitution and we shall work to correct them.

Cull Misinformation Service

9. Today in Washington, 30,000 employes are engaged in the propaganda service of the various departments resulting in duplication and misinformation. We demand that all such services be reduced to a minimum and combined into one agency dedicated to telling the people the truth, within the limits of military advisability. We point out that the publication of bad news should not be withheld for any political reason or from any false notion of its affect on public morale.

10. We declare our conviction that no individual or group of individuals should profit excessively from this war and that there should be equitable distribution of its tragic burdens among our people.

11. We demand that our Government coordinate our diplomatic, military, naval and air strategy so that we shall not be taken by surprise with further disastrous results.

12. Inasmuch as lack of organization is an outstanding weakness of the present Administration, we urge the formulation of policies to the end that the conduct of the war may be under the unified command and not by divided staff committees.

Inquiry Told Plastic Agreement of U.S., Nazi, British Firms Hampered Allies, Aided Hitler

By Felix Cotten

International News Service Staff Writer

The Justice Department charged yesterday that production of transparent plastics for use in warplanes had been hampered for years by a vast secret trade and patent pact involving American, German and British interests.

This pact, made without consent or knowledge of the American or British governments, the department declared, covered the whole field of plastics, development of which is comparatively new. It included "secret patent pools and cross licenses providing for restrictions on production, price fixing and elimination of potential competitors."

Disclosure of the giant trade and patent combine was made before the Senate Patents Committee by Walter R. Hutchinson, special assistant to the Attorney General.

Since the most important plastic embraced by the agreement is transparent sheeting, "indispensable war material for the production of all military airplanes," he declared that "it is imperative that all restrictive patent controls over this produce be removed."

Production of transparent sheeting, used for bomber noses, wind shields, cockpit inclosures and the like, is concentrated in the United States in the hands of Rohm & Haas Co., of Philadelphia, and E. I. duPont de Nemours Co., Hutchinson said.

This being the case, he declared, "it is in the interests of the Nation that other individuals and firms have the patents made available to them should they desire to engage in production of this material."

Rohm & Haas and DuPont, Hutchinson charged, gained control over production of transparent sheeting "by illegal methods."

"The evidence," he said, "drives home the point that there is extreme danger to the Nation in allowing private individuals and concerns to enter into patent and marketing agreements with foreign producers with no supervision by the United States Government."

"These agreements have not only violated the antitrust law but have also forced their signers into a position opposing the enunciated foreign policy of this Government.

Hutchinson presented information showing a far-flung and intricate system of patent and trade controls participated in by Rohm & Haas, and duPont, in the United States, Imperial Chemical Industries, Ltd., of Great Britain, and Rohm & Hass, and I. G. Farbenindustrie, of Germany.

This agreement, he declared, called for division of the world in the sale of certain plastics.

Denies Shortage

Philadelphia, April 20 (AP).—Rohm and Haas Co., Inc., of Philadelphia, declared in a statement today its patent agreements with foreign firms on use of plastic glass for military aircraft were intended to develop—rather than restrict—production.

"From time to time we have been able to sell or offer surplus production to Britain, Russia and Australia."

Army, War Industries and Farms To Take 50% of U. S. Men by 1942

Women Also Will Be Called, McNutt Declares

By Lee Carson

International News Service Staff Writer

Man Power Mobilizer Paul V. McNutt declared yesterday that nearly every second man in the Nation will be fighting the war in front line, factory or field by the end of this year.

Women in undreamed of numbers also will need to be called into the war effort to fill the country's second line of defense, he said.

McNutt emphasized that the program is on a voluntary basis, and added:

"I hope that it can be left that way, but circumstances will have to determine that."

Stating that as yet he has no legislation in mind, and hoped it would not be necessary, he added: "But I don't think anyone can predict about that."

By January next, he declared, 13 million more men and several million women must be mobilized for war industries and agriculture on a "labor priority system," which will insure, he said, that "first things come first."

Asserting it takes 18 industrial workers to equip one fighting man, McNutt said the armed forces expect to have increased their ranks to four million by next January. With an estimated reservoir of 40 million men between 18 and 64 in the entire country, it was pointed out that after the physically ineligible are subtracted, one out of every two able-bodied men necessarily will be drawn into some phase of the fight to beat the Axis.

Hopes for Jobs for All

Asked if this meant putting the country on a strict work-or-fight basis, the chairman of the new Man Power Mobilization Commission, said:

"I hope there will be a job for everyone in our war effort, white collar workers included."

Indicating that he will ask for changes in the draft law, McNutt declared that group deferment for vital industries was one of the revisions contemplated to insure the United Nations arsenal and breadbasket of sufficient skilled and semi-skilled labor.

The Nation's women, he added, will be asked to register for mobilization into essential industries.

Many women, he said, are now on the employment service rolls in various communities and from these lists the Government will draw labor where and when needed. He hoped, McNutt stated, that there would be no necessity to draw womanpower into war industries on anything but a voluntary basis.

According to the Department of Labor there are as many as 5,700,000 women who could be conceivably drawn from homes and schoolrooms to factories. Besides this 1,300,000 now in the unemployed ranks could be mustered to man the armament plant machinery.

The Nation-wide mobilization of both man and woman power, McNutt said, would probably be done on a community rather than over-all basis, depending on how labor shortages develop in various sectors.

Not Yet a Draft

McNutt lashed out at what he termed "labor piracy" through which one plant "stole" the skilled labor of another. Under the man power mobilization priorities system, he said, provisions would be written into war contracts to call a halt to "this foolish and futile" shanghaing.

House Approves Big Addition To Naval Shore Facilities

Legislation to authorize an eight million dollar expansion in Naval shore facilities was passed yesterday by the House and returned to the Senate.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, of the Naval committee, told the House that the following items made up about half of the measure:

Liquid fuel storage, $22,043,250—installations for fuel and Diesel oil in the Northern New England area, the San Francisco Bay area and in Southern California. In addition, the Navy Department contemplated aviation gasoline storage in the northeast Atlantic. The middle Atlantic, the central California and Hawaiian areas.

Aviation facilities, $130,300,000—new aviation mechanic trade schools are contemplated in Tennessee and Oklahoma. New aircraft gunnery schools are planned in the Pacific Northwest and the Southeast. In Southern California, two new Marine Corps air stations are planned, while three Marine Corps glider training stations are contem- Southeast area and five lighter-than- States. Plans are being made for 10 operational training bases in the southeast area and five lighter-than-air bases for patrol duty outside Continental United States.

Storage facilities, 85 million dollars—In the Northeast there will be a new inland supply depot, and three others will be placed on the West Coast, about 500 miles inland in the Pacific Northwest, the Central Western States and in the Southwest.

Personnel training and housing, 60 million dollars—Two new major training stations are contemplated for the central California-Nevada area and the other on the East Coast.

Ordnance facilities, $84,468,000—Two new ammunition depots in the midcontinent area.

Hospital facilities, $3,710,000—A "new hospital activity" is contemplated in the Gulf Coast area.

Shore radio facilities, $7,381,000—New radio transmitting stations are contemplated in the Boston, Hawaiian and San Francisco Bay areas.

Panama Backs War Effort, K. of C. Assembly Told

"Although it is the smallest of American republics, Panama will exert its full national effort in the fight to preserve world decencies," John Ehrman, first secretary to the Panama Embassy, declared last night.

He spoke at the annual Pan American assembly of the Washington fourth degree Knights of Columbus at the Mayflower Hotel. Ehrman described Panama as the "crossroads of the Western Hemisphere" and said that the republic had lined up squarely with the United States on economic, political and war problems.

The assembly was attended by representatives of the 20 South American republics. In addition to Ehrman, here, maintained that the resolution "adopts principles of international relations which are essential to the survival and effectiveness of the Republican Party and this Nation, namely an abandonment of isolationism and the recognition that the United States should assume a positive position in world affairs both now and after the war is over."

He added that Republicans henceforth should "see to it" that in the forthcoming primaries candidates are nominated who will adopt those principles and that "thus the Republican Party can win and become a great force for liberal, enlightened government."

Joseph W. Martin, jr., chairman of the National Committee, said the committee "did fine work" and that "the public will applaud it." Clarence Budington Kelland, executive director, asserted the action "showed we have absolute unity in the Republican Party."

Reserves Right to Criticize

The resolution, worked over by a seven-member resolutions body which included Representatives of Willkie, Brooks and Taft, also pledged preservation of the two-party system, the constitutional form of Government and private enterprise, and reserved the party's right to constructive criticism of the Administration's war effort.

The committee demanded that war posts be awarded to men and women without regard to party affiliation and weeding out of unfit political appointees.

florpartyfye

It called also for a drastic reduction in nonessential spending and the elimination of "nonessential domestic regulations."

The committee served notice that it would oppose vigorously any moves by the Roosevelt Administration to "use the war emergency as an excuse for the extension of unsound economic panaceas."

Another paragraph contended that 30,000 persons were employed in "propaganda service" in Washington and added:

"We demand that such services be reduced to a minimum and combined into one agency dedicated to telling the people the truth, within the limits of military advisability. We point out that the publication of bad news should not be withheld for any political reason or from any false notion of its affect on public morale."

Kennedy Reported Slated for Ship Job

New York, April 20 (AP).—The Daily News said tonight it was informed that Joseph P. Kennedy, former United States Ambassador to Great Britain and one time head of the Maritime Commission, was returning to Government service "to help solve the critical shipbuilding problem."

Return of Kennedy to Government service would result "from War Production Board demands for radical changes in the shipbuilding policies of the commission's present administrator, Admiral Emory S. Land," the News said.

Japs Believe Raiders Came From Carrier, Flew On to China

An imperial headquarters communique Monday said:

"A hostile navy unit centering around three aircraft carriers appeared April 18 at a distant point off the eastern coast of Japan proper, but, fearing Japanese counterattack, fled without approaching Japanese shores.

"On the same day approximately ten enemy aircraft of the North American B-25 type appeared over Tokyo and other areas, flying singly or in pairs.

"The hostile planes, which managed to escape being downed, appear to have escaped to China.

"Damage caused was extremely slight."

Previous accounts had said nine of the planes which raided Tokyo, Yokohama, Kobe and Nagoya were shot down. The Japanese said another was forced down in the mountains of central Japan and its crew of five captured.

If there were only ten planes, as the Japanese communique said, this would account for all of them, and leave none to "escape to China," as the same communique reported.

University Near Rail Yards

If, as Tokyo said, three carriers were involved, they would be likely to launch many more than 10 planes.

Japan said the damage was "extremely slight," but Berlin broadcast that the Japanese government was making grants to rebuild factories and other structures in the Tokyo area.

Tokyo hinted at the possible locale of one of the bombings, a broadcast saying 10,000 students, "including 3500 from Waseda University, were most active in air raid precautions service; they lent their assistance in many places and in many ways and aided especially in keeping traffic going."

Waseda University is in the northwest section of the old city, about 2 miles from the imperial palace ground and half a mile west of a big army arsenal. West of the university are railway freight yards and warehouses.

Domei, the official Japanese news agency, implied that damage was considerable and that the public nerves were frayed, reporting that cabinet vice ministers met to discuss raid destruction and methods of controlling "baseless rumors."

A German broadcast said a report from Tokyo last night said the Japanese government had ordered creation of a defense organization of 500,000 members to distribute "iron food reserves" in case of emergency, and that building materials have been stored at strategic points in all cities to facilitate quick repair of structures destroyed by air raids.

Domei also broadcast an account, notable for its implications of unreadiness and surprise, by Sozo Tokutomi, whom it identified as the 78-year-old dean of Japanese newspapermen.

Tokutomi said that during the raid he had to travel from the southern to the central section of Tokyo and was happy to see the people "looking up at the sky as if witnessing an exhibition of fireworks, and talking to each other—a picture of absolute composure in the face of the enemy attack."

Such conduct, he held, was "unsurpassable anywhere, and there is no need to take lessons from Londoners or any other people who have been through air raids."

He went on to say that nine planes were shot down but "in the event enemy planes come again, we are prepared to give them more fitting treatment . . .

"Unwatchfulness is the greatest enemy, particularly to victors."

The Japanese recently announced that they raided air fields being prepared for American-made planes in the Lishui section of southwest Chekiang province, about 1,400 miles from the Japanese main islands.

Easy Flight For Such Planes

North American B-25's and Martin bombers, which the Japanese had named in earlier accounts, both could make such a flight easily, if they could take off from aircraft carriers.

Ten B-25's participated in last week's long-range American raid of Japanese bases in the Philippines from Australia, but they used intermediary secret bases in the islands.

The Japanese war office announced that Lieut. Gen. Akira Muto, chief of the military affairs bureau for four years, had been ordered to a new post in the Southwest Pacific. He was succeeded by Maj. Gen. Kenryo Sato. Since the head of this bureau controls army administration and has no direct responsibility for operations, the change appeared not to be connected with the air raids.

A Japanese broadcast early today quoted Domei as saying that Home Minister Michio Yuzawa had "declared that the forthcoming general election will be held according to schedule regardless of air-raid alerts or even actual air raids, inasmuch as 'it is designed to consolidate national policy essentially to a successful conclusion of the greater East Asia war.'"

British Tanks Help Chinese Hurl Japs Back in Burma

Saturday. Over another airdrome in North Burma other A. V. G. fliers simultaneously shot down a Japanese fighter and a reconnaissance plant. In all these actions the Americans did not suffer the loss of a single plane.]

The attack at Yenangyaung on the Irrawaddy, 260 miles north of Rangoon, was the first in which British forces under Gen. Harold Alexander and Chinese troops under U. S. Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell have cooperated in a single action.

Planned some days ago, the synchronized attack probably was intended to nip off the Japanese spearhead which threatens to turn the Allied line from the West.

The main tank-infantry blow was delivered from the north, while infantry drove at the Japanese flank from the west, from near Myothit.

Although a Chungking communique announcing the recapture of Yenangyaung said several thousand British troops trapped to the south had been relieved, British informants said they doubted any considerable force was in that position because the oil fields already were ruined.

Five hundred Japanese were casualties, and Chinese losses were placed at 100 by Chungking.

Only a Breathing Space

Despite the local success, British quarters said the counterattack had won only a brief breathing space for the wearied and outnumbered defenders faced by about five Japanese divisions.

The Chinese force which took part was probably small, informed quarters said, and unless the R. A. F. is able to provide steady and direct support, a sustained counteroffensive was not expected. The armored force was composed of tanks and armored cars refitted since their action south of Prome late in March.

The Allied line now runs from Sale, on the east bank of the Irrawaddy, 30 miles south to Yenangyaung, thence 55 miles southeast to Taungdwingyi where the British have successfully held despite savage Japanese attacks, then 40 miles east to Pyinmana on the Sittang front held by the Chinese, and 80 miles in a southeasterly direction to Bawlake, 15 miles west of the Salween River.

Yenangyaung was the main danger point to this line. Now the critical zone appears to be between Pyinmana and Taungdwingyi where the Japanese might attempt to drive through to the flat plains north of Lewe and within reach of Meiktila. Meiktila, 80 miles north of Pyinmana, is only 75 miles south of Mandalay, last big Allied base in Burma.

[Pyinmana, on the Salween River line, near the Thailand border, heavily reinforced Japanese units were attacking near Polarck, 35 miles south of Loikaw, the United Press said. Chinese forces still held Polarck, which is on the west bank of the Salween, and heavy fighting was under way at last reports.

[Chinese reinforcements were reported still pouring into Burma over the Burma Road, which has ceased to be a commerce route for American war supplies to China, and has become a military highway with the direction of traffic reversed. Trucks carrying Chinese soldiers were said to be pouring into Burma in a constant stream.]

forces fighting in the northern part of that island.

The night communique stated that additional troops had been landed near San Jose on the southwestern coast of Panay, a new point of invasion. "Sharp" fighting between the American-Filipino defenders and the Japanese was going on near Lambanao, where our counter attacks held up the enemy advance.

There was also fighting farther south in Mindanao. An American-Filipino patrol ambushed two bus loads of enemy troops, dealing out heavy casualties.

Five Dive-Bomber Attacks

Yesterday morning's Army communique reported the opening of the new intense artillery attack on Corregidor and the other island forts. The shelling came from the big guns mounted in new positions in Bataan and Cavite.

Five dive bombing attacks were made on the main fort and light bombers assaulted both Corregidor and Fort Hughes from high altitudes. One of the planes was hit by an antiaircraft shell.

The morning report told of fort guns returning the Japanese fire, knocking out at least three enemy batteries and scattering troop concentrations on Bataan.

Last night the War Department declared that the heavy artillery attack on Corregidor continued all through Monday, while the air attacks slackened.

In reporting that the artillery shelling had damaged the island fortress, there was no mention of our guns returning the fire.

Gas-Stranded Motorists to Set Capital Record

A record-breaking number of Washington motorists were stranded throughout the city last weekend because of dry gas tanks, the American Automobile Association reported yesterday.

Between 8 p. m. and midnight Sunday the A. A. A. emergency service answered 51 calls from motorists whose tanks had run dry. The car owners who had depended on the few all-night stations here, found that even those were sold out far earlier than anticipated.

The A. A. A. advised drivers to stock up before setting out on week-end trips in the future.

Army Plans Arms Plant 'Somewhere In Maryland'

All employers, citizens, civic and other organizations were urged to cooperate with the D. C. Employment Center in registering "all who are possessed of skilled qualifications or who desire training for skilled or semiskilled jobs in war industries."

Nazi Probe Calls Two Coughlin Aides

responsibility and control I have exercised personally and officially by my effective moral and spiritual influence and direction over the editors, publishers and owner of Social Justice.

"If Social Justice, as Attorney General Biddle is reported to have declared in his press conference, is 'clearly seditious,' the responsibility is mine and mine alone."

The nominal owners of the magazine are Coughlin's aged parents, Thomas J. Coughlin, and Mrs. Amelia F. Coughlin, Royal Oak, Mich.

Coughlin has referred to his clerical position frequently in his activities as an agitator since he first set up as a radio rabble rouser during the depression. Prelates of the church more than once have declared officially that the church did not sanction this agitation.

After Coughlin issued his statement yesterday, the chancery of the archdiocese of Detroit, made public a letter which Coughlin wrote Archbishop Mooney on May 16, 1940. In this letter, Coughlin said, I will not be responsible for Social Justice beyond the issue of the date of May, 27, 1940."

A chancery spokesman then directed attention to a recent statement of the chancellor, the Right Rev. Edward J. Hickey, that no priest of the diocese has asked or received permission to contribute to Social Justice, and no priest has been authorized to associate himself in any capacity with its publication or circulation—or to the knowledge of this office has actually done so."

The special grand jury in Washington began yesterday on the searching investigation of Social Justice which was ordered last week by Attorney General Biddle.

Hickey Returns to Help

Special Presecutors William Power Maloney and John T. M. Reddan, who have been conducting the investigation of the vermin press, were joined by Lieut. Edward J. Hickey, jr., who was associated with Maloney in the conviction of the German agents, Frank M. Burch and George Sylvester Viereck.

"Loaned" by the Navy Department because of the importance of the prospective prosecutions for sedition, Lieut. Hickey appeared at Judiciary Square in uniform, to the manifest surprise of half a dozen witnesses who were under subpena.

First questioned yesterday was Mrs. David D. Good, retiring president of the Dames of the Loyal Legion, who previously was examined last Friday. Mrs. Good was one of those who distributed copies of the "Roosevelt Is a Judas" speech of Representative Clare E. Hoffman, isolationist Michigan Republican.

Copies of this speech also were mailed out, by other distributors, in company with seditious postcards and with the "special bulletin" in which leaders of a secret revolutionist band advised their followers to arm themselves.

Hoffman circulated a statement in which he declared his speech was circulated in company with "improper material" without his knowledge and consent.

Recalled for Questioning

After hearing Mrs. Good, the grand jurors called Hoffman for the second time and he was before them for an hour. Then his secretary, Miss Helen Boyer, was questioned.

Examined later in the day were two other persons who circulated quantities of the "Roosevelt Is a Judas" speech. They were Gerald B. Winrod, editor of the magazine Defender, at Wichita, Kans. and Hermann D. Kissenger, Kansas City lawyer who was a contributor to the Bund newspaper, Deutscher Weckruf and Beobachter, and who was arrested on a sedition charge a few days after the Pearl Harbor attack.

Frank Mahony, a special Assistant Attorney General of the national defense section of the Department of Justice, also was a witness.

'Clamp Lid' on Press Termites, Congress Urged

Representative Percy Priest (Democrat), of Tennessee, a former newspaperman, yesterday demanded that "the lid be clamped down" on that small fringe of the daily press preaching disunity and defeatism.

Taking the floor of the House, he charged that this element is abusing freedom of the press by "making a consistent practice and policy to publish matter designed to create disunity and defeatism among our people."

At the same time, he called for consolidation of the Government's sprawling publicity agencies under a centralized information service which will give "the cold, hard and tragic truth" about the war and our enemies.

He likened the attitude of the defeatist press to a householder who refuses to turn out his lights during a blackout. He has the right to burn his lights if he pays his electric bill, Priest said, but by insisting upon the exercise of that right he might furnish a target for a bomb that would destroy the whole block.

He paid tribute to the great bulk of the press and its patriotic conduct under the voluntary censorship code.

answer for the grand jury.

Yesterday he declared that during his morning appearance before the jury he told Maloney he got his information that he was being smeared with other isolationist Congressman from his secretary, Miss Helen Boyer.

"He (Maloney) wanted to know where she got it," Hoffman continued. "I suggested to him that the only information I had on that, of course, was she had said to me that she had obtained the information from a man named Ahearn, who lived here in Washington . . .

"This morning the attorneys advised me that they had called Mr. Ahearn and that he had denied making such a statement to Miss Boyer and that he therefore wanted me to retract and apologize.

"Well, now, I am not retracting and I am not apologizing. I am saying this. It now appears by the statement of Mr. Ahearn, made under oath, that he did not advise Miss Boyer. It also appears that under oath she says he did. Now whether they misunderstood each other or whether that came out of thin air, I have no way of knowing. I am giving it to you as I got it."

area, the Russians said, 1300 Germans were killed.

Guerillas operating behind Nazi lines on the Northwestern Front were credited with killing 783 Germans, including a lieutenant colonel, in stalthy night raids.

The Nazi high command acknowledged "local enemy attacks" in both the northern and central sectors but claimed that all had been broken and that German counter-attacks in the north had been locally successful.

On the Svir front, northeast of Leningrad and east of Lake Ladoga, the Russians claimed an advance of two miles at one point, while Berlin itself acknowledged that Axis forces were fighting "defensive battles" there.

There was little detail about the progress of the action on the Karelian Isthmus west of Ladoga.

Word that Russian long-range guns now commanded Smolensk, which is only about 50 miles short of the White Russian frontier, supported many recent indications that that German outpost soon would be put under a powerful and decisive general assault, frontally and by envelopment.

Gen. Gregory Zhukov's Russian troops were reported advancing on the city from a position 18 miles to the northeast.

The German radio, possibly speaking of that sector, acknowledged that a reinforced Russian division had thrust between two Nazi advanced points, but claimed that the German line subsequently was "straightened out."

urday at 6 p. m.

Col. Carroll, he said, "believing they might strike back immediately, put the Philadelphia control centers in continuous operation from Saturday, 6 p. m., until Monday, 6 a. m., and called out all air-raid wardens, auxiliary firemen, auxiliary police and other members of the United States Citizens Defense Corps, amounting to approximately 50,000, for continued duty in six-hour shifts during that period."

Col. Janeway added that Col. Carrol knew it was a "favorite trick of the Axis to strike on a holiday or Sunday, when we least expect it."

"When the Need Arises"

The officer said it was "urgently necessary that we rapidly complete the organization of the Citizens Defense Corps, that we drill it to assure us that it will function when the need arises."

He suggested continuous blackout drills and the testing of control centers by command post exercises.

"Finally," he said, "the whole Citizens' Defense Corps can put on a practice air raid complete with test blackout. . . . An air raid is war. War conditions are suddenly brought to a civilian population."

No commander of combat troops, he contended, would "ever willingly take into combat undrilled and untrained troops. No commander of a Citizens' Defense Corps should let himself be caught by an air raid with an undrilled personnel. . . .

"The time may be later than we think. We believe that now is the time to put every effort into completing a defense corps that will function."

Program Here Going Full Blast, Bolles Asserts

District Defense Executive Lemuel Bolles reported that he had received no instructions from Janeway as of last night. He said that the only way the District can accelerate its civilian defense program is to order a continuous alert—and this he could not do without specific instructions from the Third Area Command.

He said that plans for the next District blackout have not been altered by the attack on Tokyo. "There's no use calling another one—unless we have to—before we've smoothed out some of the wrinkles of the last one," he commented.

Commissioner John Russell Young, United States Coordinator of Civilian Defense for the metropolitan area, said, "We have been in an alert stage for many weeks. The program is going at full blast, and except for correcting a few weaknesses shown up in the last blackout, there is nothing more we can do."

Young said that another blackout will be staged in the "very near future."

Meanwhile, the Civilian Defense Communication Institute, originally planned for April 29 and 30, will be compressed instead into an afternoon and evening meeting on April 30, the Civilian Defense Office announced last night.

The change of plans, it was explained, was due to the inavailability of the Communications Control Center demonstration by Edgewood Arsenal engineers for more than one day.

The District's own model control center, which Communications Chief Herbert A. Friede hoped to have installed last night, will be in operation some time this week, he announced.

U. S. Ready to Crack Down on Violators Of Priority Rules; Steel Companies Probed

By Paul B. McGee
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

The Federal Government, after long investigation, is prepared to crack down drastically on all violators of priority orders.

At least two additional large steel companies are being thoroughly investigated by the War Production Board and may find themselves in the same position as Carnegie-Illinois and Jones & Laughlin, suits against which were filed by the Justice Department this morning.

Inquiries have been conducted into 11 industries thus far. Two additional industries—private housing and steel warehouses—will belooked into, beginning this month.

Surveys have now been completed in 9 of the 11 industries, involving 9569 firms. A small number of these reports indicate violations of varying degree.

All of the reports are being studied by the compliance branch and punitive action will be recommended in each case of the more serious violations.

Teeth Put in Law

WPR officials pointed out that in the case of violations occurring prior to March 22, when President Roosevelt signed the second War Powers Act, the only means of enforcement of WPB orders is by injunction. However, under the powers contained in this law, criminal action may be taken, with penalties running up to imprisonment for one year, a $10,000 fine, or both.

Surveys have now been completed with respect to aluminum, primary producers of steel, primary fabricators of copper, scrap allocations of steel mills, public housing, copper ingot makers, rayon mills, copper foundries and copper scrap.

A study of pig iron users is scheduled to be completed later this week and the inquiry into chromium and nickel will be finished early next week.

A "flying squadron" of special investigators has been set up within the compliance section to insure prompt action in special cases and investigation units are being established in each of the WPB's regional offices.

Arnold Files Suits

The suits against Carnegie-Illinois and Jones & Laughlin were filed under the direct supervision of Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, in charge of the antitrust division.

They involve more than one-third of the total steel production of the United States, and are the first to be instituted under the priorities program.

The Justice Department charged in the actions that unless the steel companies are enjoined from further violations it will make impossible effective and orderly administration of the WPA program "to the detriment of maximum efficiency in the prosecution of the war."

Both companies were accused of diverting steel to their private customers "at the expense of the needs of the armed forces and the Maritime Commission."

Specifically, the suits ask the United States District Courts to grant permanat injunctions prohibiting the two steel companies from "accepting, holding, using, producing, manufacturing, distributing, delivering or dealing with or in" iron, steel, or iron or steel alloy, products, or from filling, accepting or delivering orders for such products or operating their plants or mills "otherwise than in accordance with" WPA regulations and orders; and to command the companies to comply with all provisions of WPB regulations and orders.

In requesting the Justice Department to file the suits, the WPB served notice on all industry that regardless of size—Carnegie-Illinois is the largest steel producer in the country and Jones & Laughlin rates fourth—violations of its orders will not be tolerated.

Deliberate refusals to obey regulations and orders, will, in the future, be followed up by criminal prosecutions under the terms of the second War Powers Act, a WPB spokesman declared.

Senate Delays Action on Labor Bill

Fails to Mention "Freezing"

Secretary Morgenthau's intensive voluntary bond-selling campaign would be substituted for the compulsory program sought by Henderson and Eccles. Henderson already has authority to "seal" prices and invoke licensing of retailers and wholesalers, but in the farm-price field he cannot act until prices climb above 110 per cent of parity. In addition to wage ceiling, OPACS reportedly wished to remove farm-price differential.

In was learned that the word "freezing" generally applied to a rigid wage or price seal, and to maintenance of the status quo on the closed shop issue, was not mentioned by the President during the conference.

Leaving the White House, leaders declined to discuss details. Speaker Rayburn said he did not know whether the program would require legislation. Majority Leader McCormack said the message would deal with "the cost of living during the war" and with "the factors that enter into it." He said wages could be considered one of those factors, along with such other things, probably, as taxes, profits and savings.

Silent on Later Action

Connally gave no intimation to reporters on whether he would press his labor bill motion after the President sends his message, probably next Monday. The Senate had made his motion yesterday's special order of business and colleagues had ready sweeping amendments covering the whole field of labor legislation. Connally went immediately from the White House to the Senate floor.

"The President has personally requested me not to press this motion until he sends a message to the Senate and the House within the approximate period of a week from this date," he told the Senate. "The President has authorized me to say that he made this request and that he expects to send a message to Congress in relation to establishment of a general national policy regarding the cost of living, and all factors relating thereto, including labor."

The Senate, by unanimous consent, agreed to let Connally call up his motion on April 28, the day following the message. Meanwhile, the Senate Labor Committee similarly deferred action on a compromise measure by Senator Ball (Republican), of Minnesota, designed to stablize wages and restrict the wartime spread of the closed shop through mediation machinery. Across the Capitol, the House Naval Affairs Committee already had postponed action a week on the more sweeping Smith-Vinson bill.

Austin Urges Action

During the Senate debate, Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, urged that Connally again press his motion after receipt of the President's message. Austin said "the people are looking intently to Congress, because what we do is important and it might affect morale."

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, said the country wanted action as quickly as possible but the Senate was justified in waiting for Executive recommendations. He urged that the Connally motion be immediately adopted and his bill then be laid aside until after receipt of the message. Connally said that course would involve parliamentary difficulties.

The Texan told the Senate he was "deeply concerned with respect to delays in the production of war materials by reason of disturbances in labor relations."

"This war is being waged for the safety and security of every American citizen," Connally said. "Our troops are fighting and shedding their blood that Americans may enjoy their way of life and their privileges and opportunities, including those who labor. They owe a duty to the country as well as to every other citizen.

"When we need men for the Army, we do not ask their consent—we draft them. When we need money for the Treasury, we do not ask the consent of the taxpayers—we tax them. When manufacturers want to secure materials, we do not ask their consent as to how much they shall receive—we clamp down on them with priorities. When citizens want tires, we do not ask their consent—we ration them. Labor alone must not demand that the Government secure their consent with regard to doing their duty to the country which protects them and their opportunities to make a fair wage."

Show Must Go On, OCD Advises Theaters

The Office of Civilian Defense advised the Nation's theaters tonight that the show must go on in an air raid to keep the audience calm and asked the public to obey the traditional discipline of the theater, "walk—don't run, to the nearest exit."

In the event of a direct bomb hit on the theater, the OCD left it to the theater's chief warden "to determine immediately whether the audience should remain in the theater or be evacuated."

The OCD's recommendations were issued in a pamphlet entitled "Suggested Regulations for Theaters," approved by technicians in the "air raid precautions division, War Activities Board, motion picture industry," and the OCD's civilian protection division.

The suggestions for avoiding panic and loss of life apply also to concert halls and other amusement places.

The theater managemtnt is declared responsible for arranging with the citizens' defense corps to have the theater designated as an air-raid warden post and provided with a staff of wardens and assistants for the orchestra, balcony and other parts. Managers are specifically instructed to have all wardens on duty in a raid.

Roosevelt in Person To Decorate O'Hare

Flier Gets Award Today, 'Probably' Congressional Medal

By Inez Robb
International News Service Staff Writer

Lieut. Edward Henry O'Hare, 28, the Navy's ace sky-pilot who blasted six Japanese bombers out of the air in five heroic minutes, will go to the White House at 10:45 a. m. today to be decorated in person by his Commander-in-Chief, President Roosevelt, for his unparalleled feat.

Lieutenant O'Hare is the first of this war's heroes to receive his decorations from the hands of the President. What that decoration will be had not been announced yesterday. But a White House spokesman, when asked if it would be the Nation's highest award, the Congressional Medal, smiled and said:

"Probably."

The St. Louis lad, who has come half way around the world from his Pacific Ocean base to receive the honor, will be accompanied to the White House by his bride of last September.

Hero In Need of Shine

As Navy bigwigs rushed him about Washington yesterday, Lieutenant O'Hare, looking both dazed and abashed by the fanfare, was a hero in need of a hair cut and a shine. He had not had time for such incidentals since his arrival on the West Coast and his whirlwind trip to Washington.

Much younger and better looking in person than in his pictures, Lieutenant O'Hare is a right guy, the very model of a hero, modest, inarticulate, humorous, terribly nice, and more than a little embarrassed about the whole thing.

Just what he was thinking and doing during those fateful five minutes near the Gilbert Islands isn't very clear to himself, he revealed to reporters at a Navy Department press conference.

"Things happened so fast—" he said apologetically his voice trailing off, as his black-lashed blue eyes surveyed his audience like those of a trapped man.

Picture Is Blurred

Try as he would, the man who shares with the late Colin Kelly the most glittering laurels of the war, could not give reporters a rounded picture of the fantastic battle in which, he revealed, he flew the aptly named Grumman Wildcat.

Two squadrons of Japanese planes, totaling 18 aircraft, he said, came over that day in an attempt to destroy the aircraft carrier on which he and his companions were based. Seventeen of the 18 were destroyed by American fliers.

The first squadron of nine was destroyed, with only one enemy ship getting away, before O'Hare got into action. As the first American squadron returned from this fray for refueling, O'Hare—leading a section of two planes—took off just as the second squadron of nine Japanese planes approached.

"My wing man (the pilot of the second plane) had gun trouble," O'Hare explained as if that should make everything very clear and understandable to his audience.

"It took him five minutes to get his guns in action and by that time," he added matter-of-factly, "why, by that time, it was all over."

In that brief space, O'Hare shot down five bombers for sure, and probably a sixth.

Carriers Are Precious

"You go to great lengths to protect your aircraft carrier," he continued as a grin creased his chubby, sun-burned face. "You figure, if it isn't there anymore you haven't many places to go. And, anyway, you didn't have to look very far for the Japanese planes. They were all together."

When asked if he had been afraid, O'Hare was silent for a few seconds, struggling to give an honest answer.

"I guess you'd call it that," he smilled finally. "When you go into a fight, you just wonder how you're going to come out."

When asked if he had been in any subsequent actions since he had bagged the six bombers, his answer was only a slow, incredulous grin.

One of the few details he could give reporters was that he had bagged the Japanese by attacking from the rear. But so busy were those few minutes that he could give no details of the Japanese bombers except that they were twin-engined jobs, with bow, turret and aft guns, and probably manned by a crew of five to six.

Lieut. O'Hare, who was graduated from Annapolis in 1937, is going to be very careful the next time he gets into an aerial scrap, he told reporters. He is going to do his best to fight his next engagement without benefit of audience. Because he had an audience for his history-making encounter, he laughingly described himself today as "cannon fodder for the press."

"The next time we get into a fight, I hope it will be far enough away that nobody can see it, and when we get back, we can just tell 'em we've been out shooting seagulls," he added.

Orphan Boy Finds Haven From War

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
ROBERT LACOMBLE,

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, April 20.—Still grieved by the apparent death of his parents, and bewildered by his own escape from Japanese, 13-year-old Robert Lacomble, son of a Dutch naval commander, has arrived in San Francisco.

He came in a group of several score Pacific war refugees including wives and children of wealthy rubber, oil and other commercial leaders and officials of the Netherlands East Indies and Malaya, and a number of wounded service men.

Robert's mother evidently died in the crash of a plane in which she and Robert were escaping when Japanese pursuit ships shot it down off the north coast of Australia.

Previously, Robert had witnessed the fall of Sourabaya, Java, his home, and learned that his father evidently went down with his cruiser in the battle of Macassar Strait.

A. E. Lacomble, of San Francisco, Robert's uncle, declined to question the boy in detail.

"We do know that Robert had to swim for it at least once," Lacomble said. "The boy is in no condition to tell his story yet."

New Boundary

Some members of Congress are apparently willing to barter away all hope of bringing the new War Department Building into the District in order to have the disputed boundary line drawn west of the National Airport. We hope that this trading proposal does not represent a majority viewpoint. For the argument for having the headquarters of the Army in the Capital is certainly as strong as that for keeping the airport under exclusive Federal jurisdiction.

Settlement of the dilemma resulting from double jurisdiction at the airport should not, of course, be unduly delayed. The lack of police protection there and the double taxes imposed upon air transport companies and concessionaires make it imperative that a definite boundary be drawn. Yet it is not a simple problem of drawing a line so as to put the airport inside or outside of the Capital which it serves. For most of the distance between the airport and Rosslyn the original boundary has been lost, and if it could be accurately drawn today it would be an utterly impracticable line. What Congress really faces is the necessity of establishing a new boundary between the Federal seat of Government and Virginia.

So the real question is this: Shall Congress draw a new line that will cut a slice off the overcrowded District and banish all hope of regaining Arlington Cemetery, the Palisades of the Potomac, the new War Department site and other areas needed for proper development of the Capital? Such action would flagrantly ignore the national interest. Considering the fact that Washington is now unavoidably overflowing its borders, even in the location of Government buildings, acceptance of a line at the water's edge would be incredibly short-sighted.

There may be a valid objection to Senator McCarran's bill which assumes that the recession of what was then Alexandria County to Virginia was unconstitutional. But there certainly can be no objection to asking Virginia to return this area which the Government did not need in 1846, and which it urgently needs now. If Virginia should refuse, further steps could then be taken. The first important step is to adopt a policy that will fit the Capital's requirements of the future and not the past.

Petain And Laval

Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, it is reported, spoke in a quavering voice when, over the radio Sunday, he announced the formation of the Laval regime. Whether that was due to the frailties of old age—the marshal is 85—or the result of a bad conscience is, however, unclear. It could not have been easy for the man who, back in December, 1940, booted Laval out of the government and who has repeatedly expressed to friends his detestation of the swarthy Auvergnat to ask the French people to give Laval their full support.

It is important, indeed, that he took the trouble to emphasize that Admiral Darlan "remains my designated successor." Still, he did not flinch from praising Laval as the cofounder of "the new order" that came into being in France in the days following the military collapse. And he gave his blessings in advance to the actions which Laval is about to take at the instance and with the approval of Hitler. "Today, in a moment as decisive as that of June, 1940," said Marshal Petain, "I again find myself with him (Laval) to resume the national task and that of European organization for which we together have laid the bases."

What this "European organization" means so far as France is concerned can be gauged from the statement issued yesterday by the new Vichy's new chief of government. In a broadcast to the French people Laval called France's declaration of war against Germany a "crime" and said that "rapprochement between France and Germany is the condition for peace in Europe." In existing circumstances this can only mean that Vichy now plans to go whole hog in collaboration with the Reich. From now on, in other words, Vichy France will be in thoroughgoing opposition to the nations which with all their strength are giving battle to the Axis.

In giving way to Nazi pressure and in putting Laval in a position to carry out his sinister plans, Marshal Petain has made himself a party to an act of treachery without parallel in history.

Heart Of The Enemy

Some of our Army and Navy air strategists doubtless feel that they are entitled to a few quiet chuckles at the expense of Maj. Alexander P. de Seversky. For just two days after our punishing air attacks on Japan proper, Maj. Seversky was apparently placed in the position of asserting that for the present, anyway, such attacks were out of the question. This, at least, is the interpretation which some will place on remarks in his new book, "Victory Through Air Power," which was published on Monday. For example, he says specifically that, because we have lacked the revolutionary boldness to prepare the appropriate strategy and weapons, we have no alternative but to attack Japan's tentacles, one by one, instead of striking directly at Japan's heart.

Superficially, service chuckles may be justified. For last Saturday's attacks on objectives in Japan proper were, from all accounts, beautifully planned and boldly executed. The enemy was obviously completely surprised. Moreover, considerable damage seems to have been wrought. In the circumstances, we are certainly entitled to claim credit for using available air power intelligently and with maximum effect.

This, nevertheless, does not dispose of Maj. Seversky's thesis. For when the major speaks of our inability to strike at Japan's heart, he refers not to sporadic raids, but concentrated aerial war, waged relentlessly day after day in the skies over Japan. Clearly this is beyond us for the present. And Maj. Seversky fears that it will be forever beyond us unless we ruthlessly brush aside traditional geographical patterns of military organization and start thinking in terms of the entire air space around the world. Once we do this, he says, Alaska's true importance as a base of aerial operations against Japan will emerge.

This is not exactly a new idea. Alaska's offensive importance is well recognized, and we ourselves have constantly stressed it. What is not recognized is the practicability of a super-plane attack, such as Maj. Seversky visualizes, from Alaska—or from anywhere, for that matter. His new book, to be sure, makes such an attack seem the most plausible way of defeating Japan with a minimum expenditure of man power. For this reason alone, regardless of projected aerial strategy, his argument should be followed most closely by the very gentlemen whose first disposition was perhaps to chuckle.

Sales Taxes Or—

Agitation for a general sales tax is gathering impetus. The United States Chamber of Commerce has come forward with a proposal to levy such an impost at an effective rate approaching 10 per cent with graduations for necessities and luxuries. It is estimated that nearly six billion dollars in new revenue could be raised by such means. Whether the tax should be levied on manufacturers, wholesalers or retailers is, as the chamber says, a matter of administrative detail. But, regardless of the method of collection, sales taxes, to be effective, must cover a broad field. They must be substantial enough, moreover, to be felt by the consumer when they are shifted to his shoulders in the form of higher prices.

It has become increasingly clear that we have already reached a stage in our search for more revenue where the going is beginning to be painful for the low income groups. These people happen to be the recipients of the great bulk of the national income. For that reason they will be compelled to make much heavier sacrifices in the future if we are to devote over half the national income to war uses.

Congress is therefore confronted by two unpleasant alternatives in framing a tax program: it must either recapture for the Government a steadily increasing proportion of incomes in the medium and lower brackets by direct income taxes, or it must reach those same incomes by resort to comprehensive sales taxes. That, by this time, is surely obvious. The alternative to a sales tax mentioned by Leon Henderson at Chapel Hill recently—namely wage stabilization—is no alternative at all. Wage stabilization, presumably at present levels, would not bridge the inflation gap of which Mr. Henderson is constantly warning the country.

To the extent that the sales tax is relied upon, the pressure to boost direct tax rates will be relieved, though we shall no doubt very soon discover that higher income taxes in the lower brackets and fewer exemptions, as well as heavy sales taxes, are all essential.

Of course, such sales taxes will lower living standards by adding to the prices of consumable goods. But income taxes likewise lower living standards by reducing the volume of income available for consumer purchasing. Indeed, unless our living standards are sharply reduced, we cannot meet our commitments to devote over half the national income to war use. So when objections are raised that general sales taxes would be "inflationary" because they would raise living costs and lead to demands for higher wages, the only answer is that all taxes force workers and all other consumers to spend less. If labor tries to beat the tax collector by demanding wage increases to offset war tax levies, direct or indirect, our fiscal program will be a dismal failure—insofar as it is designed to curtail civilian buying and release goods for war purposes.

REA Smear

We publish in our letter columns today a severe indictment of a recent Post editorial entitled "Crackdown." In doing so, however, we merely extend to Administrator Harry Slattery of the REA an opportunity to express his opinion of the editorial. We do not retract one word of it. And since Mr. Slattery's wrath seems to have induced him to take liberties with the editorial, it is necessary to recall what we said and what the facts are.

"The most casual newspaper reader," writes Mr. Slattery, "will readily detect the error in your assertion that 'private resources were mobilized for war some time ago.'" But in order to expose this alleged error Mr. Slattery misquotes the editorial. What we said was: "In most instances, however, private resources were mobilized for war some time ago." Since we did not say that all private industry had been put on a war footing, Mr. Slattery's reference to synthetic rubber and aluminum, if it is valid in any respect, is simply beside the point.

Mr. Slattery accuses us also of seeking "to discredit the Rural Electrification Administration with the exploded falsehood that lines being built to serve war-vital industries 'duplicate existing facilities.'" But why should he attribute that "exploded falsehood" to The Post? This part of the editorial was quoted from the report of the House Committee on Military Affairs. And the committee's report was in part based upon findings of the Army Engineer Corps. Does Mr. Slattery contend that the House Committee and the Army Engineers indulged in "exploded falsehoods?" In the language of the committee report, the Army engineers found "that the proposed projects of the Brazos and the Farmers Co-ops are duplications of existing facilities and at present have arranged to serve only customers which are already being served from existing facilities." We prefer to take the engineers' word for it, unless and until Mr. Slattery can offer proof to the contrary, which he certainly has not done to date.

More serious is Mr. Slattery's statement that "the REA lines which your editorial writer and other foes of the REA selected for particular criticism have already been approved by the agencies who have the responsibility of assuring an adequate power supply for war industries." Now the only lines which the editorial specifically mentioned are those of the Brazos River Co-op. We clearly pointed out that the WPB allowed work to go forward on some parts of this project that were near completion. What we criticized was the effort of REA to go ahead with the entire project in the face of a critical shortage of copper. Not only did this REA co-op ignore the orders of the War Production Board; it also stooped to deception in an effort to show that its project was much nearer completion than it actually was.

A release from the WPB on February 17 reports that the board "today prohibited" the Brazos Co-op "from completing construction of a rural electrification project in Texas." Further work on some 330 miles of branch lines and 15 substations was forbidden. Since that date, the WPB informs us, work on this project has been still more drastically curtailed to conserve copper. Yet Mr. Slattery asks our readers to believe that the unnecessary REA lines which we criticized have been approved. That scarcely leaves him in a favorable position from which to smear editorial writers and columnists.

Departmental Guards

Isn't it about time that something was done about the Departmental Guard's pay bill that has been before Congress since the first of the year. Do they intend ever to do anything about it, or are they just going to pigeonhole it again as usual.

The situation with 75 per cent of us is this, we have come to Washington from practically every corner of the country, knowing we were going to receive $100 per month but had no idea living expenses would be so high. For instance, I receive $48.25 twice a month. Out of this my expenses are as follows: $40 for a hole in the wall, $5.50 for bus fare. With what little is left, two of us have to buy food, clothing, insurance and other necessities of life and believe me it can't be done.

Although we have had to wear our uniforms home from work, and be ready for a call at any time we still have to pay car fare. Wny aren't we extended the same courtesy as the Metropolitan Police and firemen? This would at least lessen some expense, and give us a break.

Voluntary Savings

Before compulsory war savings is put into effect, why not make a determined effort to stimulate interest—to supplement the patriotic appeal—in voluntary savings?

Contests can be held throughout the country to choose the prettiest, wittiest, most popular or most talented members of clubs and other organizations. Purchasers of war stamps or bonds could be entitled to one vote for their choice.

Candidates and "voters" would have the satisfaction of knowing that not only will they be aiding their favorites, but they will be helping to make the Japs and Hitler grow much littler.

Objects To "Crackdown"

Your editorial, "Crackdown," in The Post of March 29 is filled with glaring inaccuracies and gross distortions.

The most casual newspaper reader will readily detect the error in your assertion that "private resources were mobilized for war some time ago."

What of the holders of synthetic rubber patents, who are still trying to excuse their failure to build up a synthetic rubber industry comparable to Germany's?

What of the aluminum industry, which for many months after the launching of our plane and shipbuilding program contended that there was no danger of an aluminum shortage? Your readers may recall its pleas that "existing facilities" were adequate.

The "existing facilities" of the private utilities were just about as "adequate" as the aluminum plants and synthetic rubber factories. In every section of the country in which REA cooperatives have launched new lines since the start of the national defense program the power needs of war establishments have grown until a serious shortage is already threatened. Your editorial writer, however, still seeks to discredit the Rural Electrification Administration with the exploded falsehood that lines being built to serve war-vital industries "duplicate existing facilities."

On March 29 you wrote, "Only now, nearly four months after Pearl Harbor, has this governmental enterprise (REA) been brought into line."

The REA was most emphatically in line with the defense program for many months before Pearl Harbor. Its field engineers, directors of REA cooperatives and engineering firms employed by the cooperatives had constantly at their fingertips a wealth of detailed information on existing power facilities and probable power needs for defense uses. In numerous cases REA engineers were able to give Army and Navy engineers and private manufacturers invaluable assistance in arranging for adequate power service for landing fields, training camps and industries. This is the record.

During the month of March, REA cooperatives had 23 applications for connections by establishments requiring 15 KW of transformer capacity or above. Among the applicants were a lead and zinc mine, ordnance plant, bullet factory, shell case factory, bomber training field, Army camp, Coast Guard station, emergency landing field, filtration plant for Army camp water supply and defense housing units. Other applicants were an irrigation project, hatchery, coal mine, peat mine, sugar refinery, feed mill and sawmill. The entire list might readily qualify as war service establishments.

That is the type of consumers served by virtually all new construction launched by REA cooperatives in the last year. While the private utilities were still contending that "existing facilities" were "adequate," the REA cooperatives were taking steps to assure a genuinely adequate power supply for essential defense establishments.

The REA lines which your editorial writer and other foes of the REA selected for particular criticism have already been approved by the agencies who have the responsibility of assuring an adequate power supply for war industries. Investigation has established the fact that "existing facilities" which the private utilities claimed were "adequate" to serve defense needs existed only on paper and in the greed of the utilities for war contracts and the territory developed by REA cooperatives. No REA cooperative has attempted to go out of its own territory for a defense contract—territory which never had adequate electric service before the REA was created.

Since issuance of the War Production Board order which you gleefully hail as a "crackdown" on the REA, an order which merely requires that individual priorities be obtained on all REA construction projects, the WPB has issued new orders granting priorities on materials for completion of 34 REA projects. That fact alone should be answer enough to your charge that the REA has not been "in line with the war program."

It is easy for individuals, columnists or editorial writers whose opinions do not affect our Nation's future, to criticize. They will not be held accountable by the judgment of history. But all too often they crowd on the sidelines of war grinning horribly in the hope that a misstep by our chosen leaders may place them over a prostrate democracy. HARRY SLATTERY,
REA Administrator,

Congress And Labor

Since 1776 no problem has faced the Congressmen and us which strikes so directly at the heart of our existence. Should we lose this struggle, they would become no more than one of us 40 million nonentities who are the "workers" of our system of accomplishment and progress.

There are a few in their ranks who are both patriotic and competent, who by force of sensible and progressive service really keep the boat moving. They should be congratulated and given our blessing, but all too few there are who warrant any great acclaim from us.

There are also those who clutter the Congressional Record with "piffle" to send back to their henchmen, postage free, mind you, in an effort to extenuate their jobs, using up time for which "we" are paying at the rate of $10,000 per year, plus traveling bonuses, etc., plus salaries of secretaries and other employes who actually do most of the work that is done in their offices, leaving them practically free to entertain prominents from home districts to aid in insuring reelection.

There are none of us 40 million workers who get $10,000 per year and addenda, nor do we have "paid for "assistants" to do our work, nor are we placed with a guaranty of two to six years' tenure. We have to and do fill our jobs or we get fired—no traveling expenses while seeking the next one.

When Congressmen can't be progressive, it should be their job to keep still. Negative arguments can't win this struggle. Let some of them translate into labor equivalents the man power hours spent on the floor of Congress in expounding negatives and they should be ashamed of the record.

For 100 years labor has fought for higher living standards, resulting in gains which produced the slogan, "The American Way of Life." This slogan stirs the hearts of all real Americans. We are all glad to fight for its eternal existence.

We have as great a percentage of our ranks of 40 million workers who are as real patriots as Congress has in its ranks, but the Congressmen enact the law governing their emoluments and our pay. Let's not see them "cut" us and forget themselves.

We suspect the boys who shout the loudest about our pay would still be the "ravers" when the men who really do things feel that the "march to victory" demands a reduction of the standards of living, and when and if that time comes we 40 million workers will "take it" like we pay our taxes now.

Reverent Emotion

When you wrestle with an overpowering emotion—such as the one which hits you in the solar plexus when standing before the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier—you wish to tell fellow creatures about it, and words will not come to your aid.

Seeing, or rather feeling, the snappy military attitude of the guard in an unerring devotion to his particular duty is something every American should experience. In these times more than ever.

Too many go there with the attitude proper to enjoying a circus. There should be more reverence and humility before that monument—not in the sense that a pile of stone should in itself invoke prayer, but that hovering around that spot is the real spirit of America.

The only way such an emotion can really be expressed is by tears which will flow in spite of yourself.

The Post Impressionist

Peter Pan Of London

I think he impressed me the most of any of the "sights" I saw in London during my brief and only visit to that city some ten years ago. And that is why I set out, one sunny morning a few days ago, to learn, if possible, how he has been faring under blitzkrieg. I first made inquiries at the British Library of Information in the R. C. A. Building at Rockefeller Center.

"I'm very sorry, madam," a girl clerk told me, "but for information of the sort you seek I should advise your trying the British Press Bureau in the British Empire Building across the way.

I did and with better success, for I was immediately informed that Sir Frampton's statue of Peter Pan—wasn't it that to which I referred?—had been "safely stored somewhere for the duration," the site in Kensington Gardens on which the statue had long stood having been dug up for an air raid shelter. I left the press bureau, feeling greatly relieved. Wherever he was, Peter Pan was fairly safe from Hitler's bombs.

I remembered, as I walked across the Mall and began strolling down Fifth Avenue, that I had begun worrying about Peter at the very beginning of the present war when I had read of the hurried evacuation into the country of London's children. Yet I had not thought of him then as in immediate danger but, rather, as lonely and puzzled. At that time I could almost hear the fairies, Tinker Bell among them, and the field mouse and the bunny and the vaguely sculptured dream-children, Wendy in their midst, at the base of the small statue, asking Peter to tell them what had suddenly become of the littlest Londoners.

"These are such perfect days for playing outdoors, Peter," I could almost hear Wendy reminding him. "Why aren't the children around? Where are they?"

"You're still playing the proper tunes for 'London Bridge' and 'Ring-a-Round-a-Rosy' on your flute, Peter; aren't you?" Tinker Bell put in. "But no one's here to listen or to dance and sing. Grownups go by. But they never do hear your music. Their ears aren't properly attuned. Wendy just asked you—but you didn't answer her. Where are the children? It isn't because of school they never come any more. School doesn't keep all day and every day—and many of them haven't even began to go—they're too little. Do you suppose, Peter, a Pied Piper has come to London and lured the children away? But wouldn't all the Bobbies have spotted him immediately and interned him as a Fifth Columnist before."

But Peter's music—yes; I could hear the highest notes of it—drowned out Tinker Bell's tiny voice. It was very evident that he did not know the answers and so had decided to play his flute a little louder and a little faster to keep up the courage of his companions and his own morale.

The weeks went on after that into winter. Dreadful things had been presaged to happen to London, but none of them did actually come to pass—just then. I was busy. I did not again think of Peter until I read in the papers that many of the children who had been evacuated were being allowed to go back to London. Even the young princesses, of whom Peter has always been especially fond, as they are of him, returned for a visit with the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace. It was all very reassuring to me—and I was certain Peter was delighted, for, without doubt, the children would hurry to Kensington Gardens to tell him all about their experiences in the country. Wendy and Tinker Bell, the fairies, the bunny, the field mouse, the children and Peter himself would have a big, jolly celebration of the children's homecoming, I was sure.

That was, in these days of swift-moving events, a very long time ago. A great deal has happened to London since then. And now, I had been told, Peter no longer stands in Kensington Gardens—that an air raid shelter had been dug where he stood.

Strange—the more I think about the air raid shelter, the more clearly I can see the greensward on which Peter stood when I first beheld him on a summer afternoon in 1931. The grass is velvety green and pied with daisies and buttercups and clover. And there, the blue, blue water of the lake in back of him—white swans floating prettily on its smooth surface—stands the bareheaded, barefooted, simply clad Peter. It is a glorious afternoon, warm and sunflooded. And Peter is playing his flute with increased joy as scores of boys and girls, in their gay, summer clothes, dance about him. Tinker Bell, Wendy, the fairies, the bunny and the field mouse are all enjoying the occasion immensely. And so am I—a stranger in London, yet, suddenly, feeling no longer strange, but rather like a person who has stepped inside of a beloved book of fairy tales and been invited to sit down in the middle of a favorite fairy story. Literally, I am seated on the flower-pied grass. I glance up at the sky over London. It, like the water in the lake in which it is reflected, is very blue—a serene sky, enfolding the vivid, vital serenity of the earth-held scene of which I am an integral part.

It is there—in Kensington Gardens—rather than at my desk in a Manhattan apartment that I seem to be.

Lanier

I enjoyed Paul H. Oehser's article in the April 17 issue of The Post concerning Sidney Lanier's birth anniversary. He mentions that eight volumes of "Poems of Trees" published one each year in honor of Lanier have been published. It no doubt will be of interest to the many Emory University alumni in Washington to learn that the editor and compiler of these volumes is none other than their old English teacher (in many instances) Dr. W. F. Melton. EMORY C. PHARR.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Forgotten Men

WITH THE APPOINTMENT of Gov. McNutt and the War Man Power Commission we can perhaps begin to see in a new light and somewhat more clearly the many labor questions which the country has been discussing. A long step has been taken towards universal service for war. Gov. McNutt is specifically directed to recommend the legislation which will be necessary to supplement the powers that Maj. Gen. Hershey has already developed in regard to deferment under the draft law. Now when a country moves toward universal service, the peace-time labor problem is tranformed into the wartime man power problem. As that change takes place, all the stock issues in industrial relations are changed and many of these issues are superseded. It is, therefore, not only reasonable but very necessary for Congress and for the public to pause for a reappraisal of the actual situation.

LIPPMANN

In the broadest terms the essential difference is that the old labor problem in war industry has revolved around the hiring of men and women by private employers —whereas the new man power problem will revolve around the conscription of men and women by the Government for service to the Nation. The difference is so far-reaching that it will take us all some time to adjust our minds to it.

YET WHAT has happened recently in the agitation about the 40-hour law shows how confusing it is to think as we have usually thought about the labor problem. From all parts of the country there is a very strong attack on the 40-hour law as an obstruction to the war effort. At the same time the responsible officials in Washington have been unanimously opposed to a change in this law, and the heads of the war industries have taken little or no part in asking that the law should be changed.

This is surely a very odd situation, and it has produced a rather bitter and excited controversy. Yet it is, I think, a case where the advocates on both sides have been right but there has been no meeting of minds because they have been talking about different things. The war production officials have been talking about plants which have war contracts: it is quite true that in these plants the 40-hour law does not hold production down to 40 hours a week. It merely increases the weekly wage. A repeal of the law would mean an actual reduction of wages. The war production officials look upon repeal as a dangerous nuisance which would open up a new cycle of labor demands to bring total weekly wages back to the present level. For in these plants money is not a consideration to the employers because the Government pays the wage-bill.

THIS EXPLAINS why Mr. Nelson and all the other officials do not want the 40-hour law disturbed, and it is not necessary to invent other reasons, as for example that they are being dictated to by the labor union officials. On the other hand, the agitation against the 40-hour law, which is so strongly reflected in Congress, has its own valid basis. It is not necessary to invent reasons for it, as for example that it is some sort of antilabor conspiracy. The agitation against the 40-hour law does not arise from the war contractors but on the contrary from the industries which do not have war contracts, and must therefore pay their own wage bills. I feel sure from letters which reach me, and from letters to Congressmen which I have seen, that the complaint comes from the smaller businessmen who do not deal with Mr. Nelson or with the war procurement agencies.

For them the 40-hour law is a real impediment to a longer working week and to the more complete use of their machines and plants. For them the law works —as in the days of the depression it was meant to work—namely, as a severe penalty on longer hours in order to compel them to hire more men. Their complaint is a real one. They are not paid by the Government. They cannot raise prices or Mr. Henderson will put a ceiling over them. They cannot easily hire more men because men are being drafted into the Army or lured into the war industries where they get deferment and also higher pay. The feeling in Congress comes from them and it is no accident that the feeling is strongest in the South and Southwest where there are relatively fewer war contractors, relatively more small businessmen who are caught by frozen prices, rising taxes, shorter supplies of materials and labor, and finally penalty payments for working more than 40 hours.

IT IS PLAIN, I think, that as Mr. Nelson proceeds with the conversion of industry and as Gov. McNutt and Gen. Hershey proceed with the mobilization of man power, more attention must be paid than any one in authority is now paying to the problems of producers who, though outside the war effort itself, are nevertheless very necessary to the country. At the peak of mobilization for total war they will probably still represent something like 40 or 50 per cent of the national economy. Even after all the civilian luxuries and conveniences and gadgets have been stopped or converted to war, there will still remain a very large civilian industry that must be kept going and must be encouraged.

BECAUSE they do not have war contracts and Government subsidies, they need separate and different treatment in regard to prices, wage policy, and taxes. What is a good and workable policy for the war industries is almost certainly not going to be a good and workable policy for the other industries. And while they must, of course, give the right of way to the war industries on priorities of materials and man power, the very fact that they have given the right of way makes it all the more necessary that they should be specially considered and protected. No one in Washington is really making this his preoccupation. Every one is so preoccupied with war industry that no one is wholly concerned to look after other industry and speak for it at the Treasury, in the formulation of labor policy, and in the operation of price control.

THERE ARE many obvious reasons why the essential nonwar industries must be protected. There is one reason, which is perhaps less obvious, that is worth emphasizing. As more and more materials and men are mobolized for war, there is an ever increasing need to develop substitutes to keep the life of the country going. These substitutes can in many cases be discovered and suggested by the Government. But by and large this is a field where the inventiveness and private initiative and the enterprise of the people can do much, and are in fact indispensable.

Where we do not have to regiment for war, we ought, I believe, as a matter of deliberate policy to put a premium on private enterprise in the belief that it can solve many problems which the Government is too busy to think about. For that reason we ought in our laws to favor enterprises which develop substitutes out of materials that are not preempted for war. We ought to revise the labor laws to promote these enterprises. And we ought to think carefully about price ceilings in this field so as to be sure that in the rush to freeze everything, we do not freeze out the incentive for invention and ingenuity and initiative.

Typhus Front

By Andre Visson

A European Invasion

SPRING is there. And while we try to discover how many divisions the Axis war lords have on different sectors of the Russian and Near Eastern fronts and where and when they will strike first in this crucial year of 1942, there are already armies on the march in Europe, armies of tiny struggling invisible beings, which can boast of having destroyed during the last centuries more human life than all the European wars combined.

These are the armies of lice carrying the Rickettsia prowazeki, which is the scientific name for the typhus germ.

They are nobody's allies. They fight their own fight. They try to cross the fortifications which the men build by establishing sanitary cordons and quarantines. They appear everywhere where there is filth and malnutrition. Spring's sunshine and mud give them new vigor. They make no discrimination among the humans whom they attack and whose blood they suck and infest. But they are undoubtedly much more dangerous for Hitler's soldiers than for the Russians who, especially among the older generation, are comparatively immune after having paid, between 1919 and 1922, a heavy toll of eight million casualties.

DR. GOEBBELS is very anxious to minimize the new danger which Hitler's armies are facing in the East, while the Nazi public health department is doing its best to block the spread of the terrible disease. When Anthony Eden stated in the Parliament that typhus was sweeping from the Baltic states, White Russia Ukraine and eastern Poland into central Europe and Germany itself, the Herr Doktor labelled this statement "British propaganda." But the Nazis lack a coordinator of their own propaganda. While Dr. Goebbels was denying the typhus danger, Dr. Fritsch, director of Nazi public health service, emphatically declared that "the body of each German must be transformed into a dam against the Eastern plagues." And Prof. Ricke, of Hamburg's Medizinische Institute, made a pathetic appeal for "soap, fats, coal" —the indispensable munitions in the fight against the new enemy on the Eastern front.

The main center of the epidemic is in White Russia and in Poland. It is there that the Germans are concentrating all their effort in the fight against typhus. The public health service of the general government held a congress in Krynica, where it accused the Polish physicians of inability to build up an organization to deal with the epidemics. The Jews were described by the Nazis at this congress as "lice-bearers" and principal agents of the Eastern plague. But at the same time the Nazis pressed into service all available Jewish physicians and even released some whom they previously put into concentration camps. This attenuation of racial status stresses the seriousness of the situation, which has been, moreover, officially acknowledged at the Krynica congress by Medizinalrat. Dr. Beurman and Prof. Kudicke was appointed as special officer for dealing with typhus in the general government and 65 "plague columns" for disinfecting the source of epidemic were set up the governor general, who opened a credit of eight million zlotys for the campaign.

THE NAZIS now claim to have successfully suppressed typhus in western districts of Poland. They have, indeed, tried to block the spreading of the epidemic by a strict quarantine between Ostland (Eastern Gau, comprising the Baltic states, White Russia and northwestern Poland) and the Reich. All travelers from Ostland must twice undergo "delousing" treatment on the border, unless they can produce an affidavit issued by a German physician certifying that the bearer had been duly "deloused." The Nazi occupying authorities prohibited all gatherings in Ostland. It was only at the end of February that after vehement protests of Lithuanian Catholics, who are very religious, that church services were authorized if attendance did not exceed 40 people.

The Polish official circles in exile received information from Stockholm that on October 19, 1941, the German Sanitary Commission for Ostland issued a confidential order to the German military authorities in eastern Poland and in White Russia to kill all the civilians affiliated with typhus wherever it was impossible to isolate them or to give them proper medical attention.

Despite all these drastic and inhuman measures the typhus, according to German sources, is not only in Poland and in White Russia but in Germany itself and even in Nazi-occupied western Europe.

In January the railway employes in Vilna were not allowed to approach trains transporting hundreds of Nazi soldiers stricken with typhus. In the third week of January, 14 typhus fever cases were reported from a German military camp at Thorn, near Konigsberg, Eastern Prussia.

In the same month of January, 200 employes of a Leipzig streetcar company had to be isolated because of suspected typhus. And workers' camps of the Junkers Aircraft Plant, near Ascherleben, had been put under special medical observation. Sixty-nine sick and seven dead were reported in the last week of January from Nuremberg. And the epidemic appears to have reached occupied France, for it has been reported that the German military cinema on the Avenue de la Rochefoucauld, in Paris, had to be closed because 11 of its 40 employes were stricken with spotted typhus.

THE NAZIS realize the danger they are facing. They are seeking to obtain in Switzerland and in Sweden all available antityphus serum. But the Swedes and the Swiss are unable to obtain any serum in the United States.

It is most probable, however, that though they badly need fats, soap and serum, which are indispensable in the fight against typhus, the Nazis still have a chance to limit the spreading of the epidemic this spring.

But if the typhus is compelled to retreat this spring, it will come again. And it will come with a much greater virulence than in World War I, when, appearing first in Serbia, it killed in less than six months more than 150,000 persons. It will kill this time millions and millions, because the enslaved Europeans suffering from Hitler's rule are getting both morally and physically weaker than their fathers and elder brothers, who knew the hardships of war and the sufferings of the occupations, but who have been spared the inhuman pressure of Nazi slavery.

Half Citizens In The War

SOLDIERS FIGHTING for preservation of the American system should not be deprived of their voting rights merely because they happen to be away from home when election day comes around. So a movement is on foot in Congress to make special arrangements for soldiers to vote by mail. Joseph W. Martin, jr., Republican leader in the House, has introduced a bill requiring the Secretaries of War and the Navy to furnish the Governors of all States with the names of men in the services. Then the Governors could supply those men with appropriate absentee ballots.

PUSEY

This solicitous attitude toward the men who are fighting our battle is well taken. Certainly they should not be denied the privileges of democracy while risking their lives in defense of it. Mr. Martin waxed somewhat too enthusiastic about his bill, however, when he stated in a press conference that it would provide an opportunity for all men in the armed services to vote in the forthcoming elections." He estimates that more than three million men will be in the Army and Navy by next November. If that estimate is correct, probably 16,000 of these selectees will have been inducted from the District of Columbia. Of course, the great majority of them will have no right to vote, whether they are at home, in an Army camp, or on the battle front.

WHEN MR. MARTIN approved the press release about his bill he obviously forgot about these 16,000 voteless soldiers from the Nation's Capital. That oversight in itself is significant. Most of our legislators are so inured to the idea of a voteless Capital that they speak of democracy being universal in this country without remembering that the seat of Government itself is a little despotism.

Imagine the situation that Mr. Martin's bill, if it is enacted, will create in many military camps and possibly at the battle front! Men who mingle together and share common hardships and dangers will be brought face to face with the fact that the Government draws a distinction between them on election day. In the airplane dropping bombs on the enemy they are equals. In the thundering hell of dive-bomber attack they share the same fate. In the hospital where arms and legs are amputated, when men suffer and die far from their loved ones, there is no invidious distinction between them.

Yet, on election day, the one will pass judgment upon his representative in public office and the other will sit as silent as the slaves of conquered France or Java.

What will be the thoughts of Washington's 16,000 men in uniform as they see their fellow soldiers marking ballots for legislators and executives to represent them in the halls of Government? It is not to be supposed that their loyalty will be undermined, for they know that the only hope for continued Government by the people lies in victory for the United Nations. But the sharp realization that they are asked to risk their lives for a great Nation that is too slothful to integrate them into its democratic system will nevertheless be a souring experience.

THE BOYS from Alaska and Hawaii need have no such feeling. Both those distant outposts have at least speaking representation in Congress in addition to their local governments. Alaska with less than one-tenth the population of Washington is accorded infinitely greater political rights. And the same is true of Hawaii, with its heavily Oriental population.

Mr. Martin's casual way of dismissing the District's fighters from all consideration, as if they did not exist, is particularly disillusioning. The problem of extending the ballot to soldiers, he says, "is far from simple but it must be solved. . . . The men in the armed services must not be deprived of their proper voice in these elections." If such determination had been applied to the problem of enfranchising the District of Columbia, it could have been satisfactorily solved 68 years ago.

Mr. Martin and his colleagues would do well to remember that thousands of men and women who are coming to Washington each week to take Government jobs are also serving their country. Of course, they encounter no such risks as the soldier at the front. Yet they are patriotic Americans doing their part to help the Government in this globe-circling conflict. And as a reward a great number of them will lose their most tangible rights of citizenship. Some few will be able to maintain their standing as voters in the States. But experience in the past has shown that the vast majority will have to relinquish the feeling that they are one with the rank and file who govern the United States.

THESE MEN and women who rush here to serve the Government in a crisis will descend to the status of half-citizens like the thousands who are now permanent residents of the District. To be sure, they will retain their obligations to pay taxes. Some of them, or their sons or their husbands will be drafted into the Army. They will lose none of the responsibilities of citizenship. But they will lose the right to speak as Americans at the ballot box. So far as they are concerned, the buoyant theory of democracy will be undercut by the ugly fact of bungling local tyranny.

For the truth is that the great Atlantic Charter that we are holding out to oppressed peoples of every land as a hope for the future does not apply in the District of Columbia. The right to self-government is so flagrantly ignored here that our young men go off to fight for democracy without ever having seen a ballot box.

Congress has a real obligation to keep the forms of democracy alive in our citizen army. But in recognizing that fact how will it be possible for legislators longer to ignore the complete suppression of every vestige of democracy in the Nation's Capital?

Officer Accused of 'Sabotage' To Defeat REA Program

Representative Ellis (Democrat), Arkansas, charged in the House yesterday that Lieut. Col. John C. Damon of the Office of Undersecretary of War Patterson had "actually sabotaged the war program."

Colonel Damon, who testified before a House Military Affairs Subcommittee investigating charges of copper misuse by the Rural Electrification Administration, was described by Ellis as "the star witness for the Power Trust" in that investigation.

"I have called upon President Roosevelt to ask Col. Damon's resignation and I believe he will," Ellis declared, adding that Damon "is a substantial holder of 6 per cent preferred stock in the Utah Power & Light Company."

"Utah Power & Light is a subsidiary of Electric Bond & Share," Ellis continued. "Arkansas Power & Light led the fight against the Government aiding an REA cooperative build a line to deliver Uncle Sam's power from the Grand River Dam (in Oklahoma) to Uncle Sam's aluminum plant in Arkansas. That is what the Faddis committee was investigating." Ellis said Arkansas Power & Light also was a subsidiary of Electric Bond & Share.

"Col. Doman has spent most of his life in the employ of Utah Power & Light, Electric Bond & Share and other utilities. He is in charge of power in the War Department.

"Col. Damon has actually sabotaged the war program. It appears he is striving to equal the Teapot Dome scandal."

Representative Faddis (Democrat) Pennsylvania, chairman of the investigating committee, said he did not know whether Col. Damon was a "member of a public utility corporation," but that "some people have a hard time realizing a man may conscientiously discharge his duty no matter what his views may be on public questions." He reminded Ellis that Col. Doman took an oath when he entered the War Department.

U. S., Axis Nations in Europe to Begin Exchanging Diplomats About May 5

The State Department announced yesterday that the United States and Axis nations in Europe will start exchanging diplomats on or about May 5 when the Swedish liner Drottningholm sails from New York for Lisbon with the first group of ousted Axis officials.

The liner will bring back Americans.

It will have to make two or more trips to Lisbon because of the large number of European officials and nationals who are to be exchanged for Americans.

The Drottningholm, chartered by the United States Government, is en route from Sweden with 114 American citizens who have been stranded there since 1940. The vessel will have safe conduct from all belligerents, who have agreed not to detain it or search the passengers.

It also will bring to Lisbon "a number of Axis nationals" now en route from Latin American countries which have severed relations with the Axis. They are aboard American vessels which have safe conduct.

Company Town

Ajo, Ariz.

IF THIS STUFF about the desert and the copper country bores you, why, skip it, because when I get on a story I am like one of those pests who say, "Did I ever tell you the one about the two old maids?" and keep right on, regardless. The way it strikes me is that Detroit and other industrial areas and the shipyards and Washington get thorough coverage, but this part of the country none, although Arizona is producing a vital share of what it takes, and hardly anybody ever takes a look. In parts of this State there are planes aloft on business which is none of our business most of the time, possibly training or testing or going somewhere, and troops go by mysteriously in trains and others whip along the border in Cavalry jeeps scouting for saboteurs or whatever. And you turn off a main highway and head into a long stretch of desert and presently come to such a place as Ajo, where thousands of people are gathered about a great hole in the ground chewing off rock, which then goes through a lot of works and comes out in the form of half dried mud, which turns out to be concentrated copper ready for the smelter.

One thing that got me here is the snobbery, as I guess you could call it, of the Papago Indians, an American tribe ordinarily agricultural by trade, who live apart in a little company village of their own and will have no truck with the Mexicans or Americans of Mexican complexion and very little to do with the Caucasians. I believe they are willing to grant us racial equality if our vanity insists on recognition, but that doesn't mean they must associate with us, and they won't. Far from trying to thrust themselves into the company of white men, they segregate us, as you might say, by segregating themselves in settlements where persons of other complexion are distinctly not welcome, except, of course, on business or to pass through. Their houses are small, unpainted pine jobs, but they live pretty much in the open anyway, and their women are always doing work around the place while the men are off in the mine. They work a spell, then quit and go back to the reservation, and they spend their money on gadgets, and don't seem to have any capacity for worry, which, of course, proves them to be a very inferior people. In summer, when the temperature hits 130 in the pit, and for a stretch of 60 days stays well over 100 on the topside, day and night, the Papagoes are the steady, durable hands. The metal of the tools gets so hot that men have to wear gloves, and the Caucasians get cramps from drinking cold water and fall out, but the Papago he drinks warm water and plods right along. For some reason they like to scrap with the Mexicans, mostly with their fists, and although they are not supposed to to have liquor some of them get absolutely blind and fall down in the sun and just lie there, a spectacle to induce first degree hangover just on sight. There are three liquor stores in town, and apparently there are always some humane souls of other breeds who cannot tolerate this discrimination against an Indian wanting a drink and buy it and slip it to him on the quiet.

The mine is working around the clock, seven days a week, and a town which had fallen off to a population of only 400 or so in the idle years of 1932 to 1934 is now about 6000, and the company trains of covered steel dump cars pull out for the big smelter over at Douglas loaded with dark green, half dried mud which is a concentrate of copper, silver and gold. They call the silver and gold waste metal, but they don't waste it. For a while the cars weren't covered, but they discovered that the heat was drying the mud to dust and their copper, silver and gold, wrested from the rocks of the desert and boiled down to paste at such effort and expense, was blowing off in the hot wind in valuable quantities.

The men get as much as $12 a day on various jobs, and all the work you want and, although there seems to be no chance of a snap ending of the war and a sudden closing of the mine, the instinct to lay up a little probably is operating among most of the population. There is less and less stuff in the stores nowadays to tempt money away in needless spending, and people of the Southwest who have hit the road in jalopies and tin-canned it around the squatter camps in the days of the dust and panic may have learned what a friend a dollar is.

For many years I have been hearing and reading of the iniquities of the company town, but this is the first one I ever visited, and I am afraid it isn't typical. It is cleaner and more prosperous in appearance than most towns of equal size having elections, politics and executives responsible to the county committee rather than to a board of directors with no other standard but efficiency.

Canada's Price Ceiling

By Janet R. Keith

Women Guard Against Inflation

IF THE United States decides to freeze its price level, American women will find themselves faced with the biggest job of the war. Women spend most of the Nation's consumer income, and no price control legislation can ever be enforced unless women are willing to back it to the limit.

Four months ago Canada erected a ceiling over all prices and wages. Declaring a certain four-week period in September and October of last year to be the basic period, the government declared that no goods or services were to change hands after December 1 at a rate higher than that prevailing in the basic period. So far so good. But every retail store had its own set of basic prices. Jones, the cut-rate grocer, was selling tomato soup at 10 cents a can during the basic period; Powell, the exclusive grocer, was selling the same soup for 15 cents. If every little store in Canada had a different price ceiling, how could the government possibly check up on everyone? It couldn't, of course. The only people who could check up were the Canadian women responsible for spending family incomes.

AND SO the Canadian government enlisted the nation's housewives in the battle against inflation. The wartime prices and trade board appealed to every woman, whether she was buying a bag of flour in a western prairie town or a model hat in an exclusive city shop, to guard that price ceiling. The women gladly rallied to the cause. They didn't have to be economists to know that the cost of living had been rising too fast for comfort since the beginning of the war.

As soon as the price ceiling went into effect, delegates from 18 national women's organizations, representing one million of Canada's three million women, came to Ottawa to consult with the chairman of the wartime prices and trade board. They volunteered to save the government time, money and labor by enlisting their total memberpship as price enforcement officers.

With one-third of the nation's women already pledged to help, explicit instructions on how to maintain the price ceiling were broadcast over a nation-wide radio hook-up.

"Here's what to do first," said Donald Gordon, chairman of the wartime prices and trade board. "Write down a list of all the things you buy most frequently. Enter food and clothing items particularly. Add to your list the articles you buy at the drug store, the hardware store, or any other stores at which you shop. Run lines down each page dividing it into four columns. In the first column enter the list of goods you buy, in the second enter details of quality and type, in the third column write the name of the store. In the last column write down the highest price which the stores where you shop were charging for each article in the period of September 15 to October 11. If you can't get all the prices charged during that period, write down today's prices.

"WHENEVER you buy a product consult your list. Once in a while you may say: 'The price this dealer is charging is above his price ceiling.' Perhaps he has made a mistake, so bring the matter to his attention at once. If you discover what seems to be a deliberate evasion of the price ceiling law, report the fact in writing, with all the detail you can, to the nearest office of the wartime prices and trade board."

The government now issues a little blue book which every woman is expected to keep in her purse and use every time she goes shopping. It is called the Queen Elizabeth book because it carries a quotation from an address given by her majesty:

"Be assured that in carrying on your home duties and meeting all the worries cheerfully, you are taking your part in keeping the home front, which will have dangers of its own, stable and strong."

With this message as inspiration, Canadian women fall to the task of using the book for an accurate check on prices. The center pages are ruled into columns for listing alphabetically articles bought, quality, basic price, date, rise in price if any. If all the women in Canada keep track of everything they buy as they go about their day-to-day business of spending 80 per cent of the country's consumer income, prices cannot possibly rise. The sum total of all the country's little blue books is the most comprehensive record of price trends the government could possibly have.

WOMEN are not asked to be detectives spying on their merchants. They are reminded that most merchants are cooperating with the government to the full. No complaints are to be reported unless they have been brought to the attention of the storekeeper. Shoppers are not out to cause trouble, but if any dealer should try to poke his prices up through the ceiling, he would find a woman with a notebook standing resolutely on guard.

To bring about a better understanding between housewives and government, the wartime prices and trade board has organized a consumer branch. Its purpose is to interpret new government regulations to consumers, and present to the government the problems and suggestions of Canadian women. At its head is Byrne Hope Sanders, wife, mother, and editor of one of Canada's leading women's magazines.

Last fall she and Mme. Pierre Casgrain, an outstanding figure in the Canadian political scene, toured the Dominion from coast to coast. In every city they held mass meetings of women, explaining the meaning of price control and asking for suggestions from the women themselves.

The consumer branch, in cooperation with women's organizations, has now established a network of committees and liaison officers all across the country. Committees make themselves responsible for a thorough understanding of government regulations in their district, and act as a channel through which price complaints can reach Ottawa.

The women of Canada are taking very seriously their responsibility toward the country's wartime economy. As Leon Henderson said after a trip to Canada last fall, "A nation's price-sensitive housewives make as good a staff of investigators as a price boss could ask for."

Text of MacLeish's Speech Warning of 'Peace Offensive'

New York, April 20 (AP).—The text of the address today by Archibold MacLeish, director of the Office of Facts and Figures, at the Associated Press annual luncheon follows:

It would be a gross distortion of the truth for me to say, as is customary on these occasions, that it is a pleasure to address you. Pleasure is a totally inadequate word. There is no man living—certainly there is no man who does his living in public—who would not jump at the chance. To have the masters of the American press silenced in front of you for 20 minutes while you tell them is something any public servant would gladly sacrifice his hope of beaucratic heaven to achieve. You may realize that the silence is only temporary, you may foresee, with complete clairvoyance, that a publisher from Chicago, say, and another from New York (to say nothing of their sisters and their cousins and their aunts in other cities) will turn the dogs on you in the morning papers. But nothing—not even the dread of being called a poet by those who do not care for poets—would induce you to decline. Discretion is the better part of valor only when you hope to have the chance to fight again. And the Lord alone knows when the Director of the Office of Facts and Figures will have another chance to talk to the Associated Press.

Warns of "Peace Offensive"

That, however, is only part of the explanation. The rest of it is the simple but compelling fact that I have a question to ask you. The question is this:

You are aware—you are far better aware than I—that an Axis offensive on the psychological front is in the making. You have read the short-wave broadcasts from Vichy which quote Ankara as quoting "neutral sources" as saying that Axis leaders are drafting proposals for a generous peace. You have heard the stories alleged to emanate from Switzerland to the effect that Goering is trying desperately to find an American to whom he can communicate the peaceful intentions of the Nazis.

The stories are doubtful but their purpose isn't—at least to you. You have realized for a long time—for a far longer time than most of us—that an Axis "peace" offensive is in the cards for this next summer. These stories and others like them are the straws in the treacherous wind. And the question is—what are we going to do about it? How are we—and by "we" I mean those of us in Government and in the press who are charged with certain responsibilities in this regard—how are we going to prepare the people of the United States to meet this danger? How are we going to warn them of the nature and extent of the danger before it is too late? And how, having warned them, are we going to arm them to defend themselves against it?

I ask this question of you because it is, in the most precise sense of the term, your business. A "peace" offensive is an offensive in political warfare, and political warfare is warfare fought with the weapons journalists and publishers are trained to use—the weapons of ideas and words. It can be met and turned only by the employment—by most skillful and effective employment—of these same weapons. And it is the press, in a country which puts its reliance on a free and independent press, which has that skill and can employ it.

Government has its own responsibilities in these matters but Government, under the American division of responsibility as between the Government and the press, does not create, and does not therefore defend, American opinion—does not, at least, defend it as long as the traditional defenses provided by the press still stand. For Government to attempt to provide the country with the services of information and warnings and guidance which the press can provide and has traditionally provided, would require an army of Government information men beside which the present staff of the Government information services, however large they may look from certain angles, would shrink to total insignificance. The Government pamphlet "Divide and Conquer" recently issued by the Office of Facts and Figures may serve as an example. That account of Nazi propaganda methods has reached some 10 or 15 million people. But 90 per cent of this circulation was provided by republication in the press. And even so, 10 to 15 million people is only a tenth of the population of the country.

Government, therefore, though it cannot avoid and would certainly never wish to avoid, its full quota of responsibility, is not the first or even the main line of defense on this sector of the front. The first line is the line held by your papers and the papers of your colleagues of the press, of the broadcasts of your colleagues of the radio, and the duty of Government, so long as that line holds, is the duty of supporting your defenses.

Difficult Problem Posed

The question of the strategy of the defense is therefore a question which presents itself to both of us but first of all to you. It is not, I think you will agree, a simple question. On the contrary it is one of the most difficult and complicated of all the questions presented to this country by the present crisis. To begin with it is a novel question. Of political warfare, we, as a people, have had little knowledge and even less experience. Politics we understand and have practiced, and warfare we have had some expert knowledge of, but political warfare is a different thing.

The people of our great cities can imagine with considerable accuracy what an air raid would be and are preparing themselves with intelligence and skill to defend themselves against the danger. But a propaganda offensive—an attack not on their homes and on their towns but on their hearts—they do not understand.

They used the word "propaganda" readily enough. They know that political warfare won victories in France which dive-bombers and flame-throwers and tanks and parachute troops could never have won. But the real and deadly danger of the weapons of political warfare they do not realize for they have never seen them. We are a people to whom the most complicated machines are understandable and the most incredible mechanical miracles are believable. For we are familiar with machines and we have practiced mechanical miracles. Bombers flying at impossible speeds and unattainable heights are accepted without question and observed without astonishment. But the devices of psychological attack are another matter. Fraud as an instrument of conquest is something we have read about but have not seen, and the power of words to overthrow nations and enslave their people is a power in which we do not altogether or literally believe.

Common Sense No Guarantee

In a certain sense, and to a certain degree, that skepticism of our people is a source of strength, for it reflects a confidence in our ability to see through tricks and frauds which can be helpful. The American people, whether Yankee by origin or not, have a fair sprinkling of Yankee salt and Yankee humor, and salt and humor are powerful preservatives of sanity and sense. But there is a limit to the power of even the best of common sense to protect a people. The French were famous for their common sense from one end of the earth to the other, and nevertheless the French went down—and not least because of their possession of that very quality. The Nazi propagandists turned the famous common sense of the French people against the people of France, and from that moment the cause of France was lost. When the soldiers of the French armies and the workers in the French factories began to ask themselves the "common sense" question which the Nazi propagandists had put in their mouths—"Why are we fighting another war? What will it get us? Whom are we fighting for? Why don't we just go home and forget it? What is there in it for us anyway?"—When the French peasants and their French soldiers began asking themselves these questions the war in France was already over and the slavery of its people was prepared.

So that it would be a mistake to rely too heavily upon the saving power of American common sense alone, or to assume too easily that because the Americans do not really believe in propaganda they will prove to be immune to it. Propaganda attacks upon the American people will not come advertised as propaganda. Insofar as our enemies are able to control them they will come, or they will appear to come, as American suggestions originating within the United States. We can assume that our enemies, who have already demonstrated a considerable skill in these matters, will control their propaganda attack very well. Being German they will make certain essentially German mistakes. They will employ Nazi broadcasters of American origin like the unfortunate Jane Anderson, of New York, or some Iowa Lord Haw Haw with a Yorktown voice in the earnest Teutonic belief that Americans will enjoy listening to the voices of self-confessed deserters, or they will go through the pompous and elaborate pretense that a program obviously originating in Dr. Goebbel's back office is the offering of a secret station somewhere in the Mississippi Valley — a pretense which can only anger listeners who know a little about radio themselves. But aberrations such as these will not be frequent. They have not been frequent in the past.

Will Come Invisibly

Propaganda attack upon this country, in other words, will not come, as bombing raids may come, from off-shore carriers. They will not come with the warning signals of sirens or with telephoned messages from watchers along the New England or the Florida or the California coast. They will not come in such form that spotters, however well trained, can identify them at a glance as enemy sent. And yet they will come. And their danger to American cities and American towns and American factories and the American countryside when they do will be greater (unless adequate measure for defense against them can be taken in advance) than all the raids that might be sent against us by all the aircraft carriers of the Axis navies. Even at their worst, the bombers of the Axis were unable seriously to interrupt the British effort in the war. On the contrary they spurred that effort. But what the Nazi bombers could not do to Britain in a winter of unmitigated terror from the air, the Nazi propagandists and the Fascists and Fifth Columnists within the country did to France between one autumn and the spring that followed.

The question, then, of the strategy of national defense upon this front presents itself with terrible insistence—and presents itself primarily to those who, under the American tradition in this matter, accept for themselves certain responsibilities in the field of American opinion—those who serve, and who control, the press. In a totalitarian country this responsibility would be a responsibility of government alone. But we are waging this war in order that America may remain a democratic country—in order that America may achieve a greater, not a narrower, democracy—and if the defense of American opinion against the new and formidable dangers of Nazi political warfare, can be maintained by those who have maintained it against different dangers in the past, the responsibilities will continue to rest where they have rested.

What action the press should take through its various associations or otherwise, to determine this strategy of defense, it is not, of course, for outsiders to suggest. But even to the outsider it is evident that the question has two aspects—one internal to the press itself: A reorientation of the press to perform a wartime duty; and the other external; An organization of a method and a practice by which the press can meet successfully the attacks we now foresee.

The first of these problems I attempted to discuss a few days ago in addressing the American Society of Newspaper Editors at their convention here. Briefly, it seems to me, for whatever my opinion may be worth, that the press, in its own interest as well as in the national interest, must expose and counteract those of its members who, at this moment of national peril, are attempting to influence American opinion, not in the direction of American victory, but in the direction of American defeat. The press must police itself, not only to avoid necessity of a policing by Government nor the press desires, but also to put itself in a position to perform the duties it has traditionally undertaken in American life.

Newspapering-as-usual is as inadmissible as business-as-usual and for the same reason—which is that the national interest now comes first. What that means in the material world of business is that any business activity which interferes with the national will to win this war must give way. The same thing is true of the world of ideas in which journalists live and work. It is no longer enough for any journalist to work solely for the freedom of ideas: it is necessary now to work also for the idea of freedom. And any journalistic activity which blocks or chokes or retards the struggle for the idea of freedom must go the wartime way of the passenger automobile and the mechanical refrigerator.

The problem of the press in this regard is more difficult than the problem of industry. For one thing its recalcitrant members are more recalcitrant. Industry's discordant elements are elements which, at the worst, weaken or retard the country's effort in the war. Industry has no businesses which actively obstruct that effort and oppose it: Journalism has. Again, the methods of correction are more complicated and more delicate. Industry can rely on the police to deal with its malignerers and saboteurs but the police correction of the saboteurs and malignerers of journalism might bring the whole structure of the freedom of the press down around the ears of every honest journal. But difficult as the policing labor is, it is nevertheless a labor which the press must undertake if it is to carry the tremendous responsibility of the defense of American opinion. It is merely unthinkable that so great a responsibility should be entrusted to the press alone if the press continues to permit certain of its members to practice openly and without rebuke a journalistic policy calculated to induce the surrender of American opinion without a blow—a journalistic policy calculated to destroy the American determination to fight this war through to a final and victorious conclusion.

That the American press will police itself to this end no man who knows the record of the American press will doubt. Indeed the Augean labor has already been begun. It can have but one possible termination. But the cleansing of defeatists and divisionists will not alone resolve the problem. It is not only necessary to deal with those within the American press who weaken the American will to win this war but with those also who attack it from without. Specifically, it is necessary to develop and to perfect a strategy of defense against the devices of political warfare which will ensure the certain and continuing defense of the Republic on that front.

That strategy, I think, is neither difficult to find nor difficult to name. It is the strategy which is appropriate to our cause and to our purpose—the strategy of truth—the strategy which opposes to the frauds and the deceits by which our enemies have confused and conquered other peoples, the simple and clarifying truths by which a nation such as ours must guide itself. But the strategy of truth is not, because it deals in truth, devoid of strategy. It is not enough, in this war of hoaxes and delusions and perpetrated lies, to be merely honest. It is necessary also to be wise. And, above all, to be forearmed with wisdom.

The strategy of truth is peculiarly applicable therefore to the propaganda attack observers now foresee. To prepare themselves against a "peace" offensive, the American people need to know what a Nazi peace offensive is. They need to know, that is to say, that a Nazi peace offensive is as much a Nazi weapon as a Nazi mechanized division, or a fleet of Nazi planes. They need to know in full the history of previous Nazi operations with this weapon. They need to know for what purpose a Nazi peace offensive is made and with what end in view—that the end is never peace but always conquest—and that the inevitable consequence to the Nazi victims is defeat. If the American people are informed in full of these purposes and these effects their defense will be assured. They will know how to deal with those who urge the talk of "peace" upon them: And so whether it is proposed to them in terms of a negotiated "peace" or in terms of a negotiated "victory," or in any other terms. For they will know then that the one peace possible to those who fight this war for freedom is the peace that free men make—and that the one victory conceivable to those who want their victory to serve the cause of freedom is the victory their courage and endurance wins.

The strategy of truth, in other words, has for the object of its strategy a truthful understanding by the people of the meaning of the war in which they fight. Specifically, the strategy of truth has for the object of its strategy and understanding by the free peoples of the world this war is a war in which no outcome but their victory can be conceivable. Defeat in this war is not possible in the sense in which defeat in other wars was possible—a defeat now to be followed by years of recuperation and a victory in a later war to follow. There will be no war to follow later if this war is lost. Those who win this war will see to it—and will see to it with relative ease—that the defeated will not fight a war for many years to come; will not have the means to fight a war; will not have the means to build the planes and tanks by which alone a modern war can be attempted. The defeated in this war will be defeated as the French are now defeated; as the Poles are now defeated, as the Danes are. No French revolution of pitchforks against armies will be possible against the victors in this war; the fighting of the last two years has proven that.

Negotiations Futile

That is one fact which the free peoples of the world must understand—the fact that this war is the last war those who love their freedom will ever have the chance to fight for freedom—if they lose. The second fact is this: That negotiation in this war is not possible in the sense in which negotiation was possible in other wars. Knowing what we do or what we should of previous negotiations with the Axis powers—negotiations in Munich—negotiations in the office of Secretary Hull while the Japanese planes were already over Honolulu—knowing this none of those who now oppose the Axis would dare trust the Axis in a negotiated peace; would dare relax one moment or disarm one regiment or return one factory to civil use as long as Hitler and the Japanese were armed and undefeated.

But these two facts equal, in the arithmetic of war, a third and final fact; an ultimate conclusion: The conclusion that there is no possible outcome for the freedom-loving peoples in this war but a victory won by fighting, and that any proposal for any other outcome is a proposal which has for consequence, whatever may be pictured as its purpose, the defeat of freedom.

The ultimate objective of the strategy of truth is to carry to the people of this country, and the peoples who fight with them in this war, that certainty and understanding. For once the true alternatives are clearly seen and the necessary choice is firmly made, there can be no question of the outcome of this war on any front—either the front of arms and military effort, or the front of purpose and opinion.

If the American press will devise defenses of this nature—if the American press will devote to the defense of American opinion against the political warfare of our enemies the intelligence, the imagination, the integrity, the meticulous respect for accuracy, the devotion to the truth which have characterized its practice of the profession of journalism at its best, there can be no question that the war upon the front of American opinion will be won.

For we will then oppose to the propagandists of the Axis powers a strategy of the truth which the strategy of fraud can never overcome and a wealth of talent and of skill such as all the armies of the Nazi propaganda offices could never hope to equal. No country has ever had at its disposal greater resources with which to fight the warfare of opinion that the practice of the profession of journalism in this country has produced. No country will be more certain of the outcome of the war if these resources, led by those who know them best, are thrown into the struggle with conviction and with purpose—with unbreakable determination that nothing but an absolute and final victory will suffice.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Because His Wife's Family, With Finest Motives, Overruns Household, Bringing Gifts and Making Decisions, Man Sees Trouble Ahead; How Avoid It?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Early in March my sister wrote to get your reaction to my problem. In essence, her question was this: Is a husband being unfairly treated when his wife's family uses his household as a second home? However, because my sister signed herself "Neighbor," your answer was more of a rebuke to her, for prying, than a careful consideration of the pros and cons of my situation.

Now, I am putting the question again, and I wonder if you can answer in such a way that my wife, on reading your answer, will not take offense? I would not hurt her feelings, or those of her family, for all the world. Yet I feel that my home is not what I had always hoped it would be. I love my wife, our child and all of her family. They have been wonderful to us and my wife would be denied many things except for their generosity. Their motives are the finest and I would be the last to hint that they are unwelcome.

If only they would decide for themselves to let us stand more on our own feet, that would be the ideal solution. They read your column, and I feel that your disinterested comment might be helpful—unless you feel that our home should be their home at any time. They (my wife's family) make practically all the decisions that are made in our home. And now I can see that they are going to make all the decisions for our daughter—who is now a year old. I believe that strength of character comes of building, not in just having, and I don't want our child deprived of that growth. If things go along as they are, she will have just about everything she wants, without knowing that she wants it, because they buy her everything they think she might like. As she grows older, she may not be able to decide anything for herself.

Every weekend, we have some extra members of my wife's family as guests. I enjoy them tremendously; but I should like to be able to count on at least one weekend a month, with just the three of us,—my wife and baby and I,—together. When they are here, they play with the baby all of her waking hours and, in fact, take complete charge of her. Naturally, this relieves my wife; but I know she wouldn't object to taking care of the baby herself.

In your earlier comment you said, "A child thrives on a sense of belonging to an extensive family circle. . . . The more relatives he knows and can count on, from infancy, for cordial affection and interest, the greater is his basic feeling of emotional security and social prestige." Granted. But please tell me if that philosophy applies to this particular situation.

I could never bring myself to ask them to come less often. In fact, I would rather have them all move in permantly than hurt their feelings. But I feel that things may turn out badly for all of us, unless they can be brought to see that there is another side of the picture. What is your opinion?

WORRIED HUSBAND.

The Desperate Dilemma Of a Gentleman

DEAR W. H.: If your wife's family are civilized persons, the genuine elevation of viewpoint and delicacy of feeling which you bring to a consideration of this subtly threatening, almost insuperably difficult situation should automatically beget from them a reaction in kind,—in the event your foregoing diffident appeal for guidance comes to their attention. It is likely, of course, that their immediate, instinctive reaction to seeing the "problem" in print will be one of smarting humiliation; even of angry indignation.

But if they are latently capable of showing wisdom, generosity and justice, their reasoned afterthought should bring them quickly to chastened awareness of the fact that (1) their own ill-advised (even though well-intentioned) aggression has forced the accounting; and (2) that their defensive dismay, on seeing the import of their actions dispassionately appraised, is but the palest reflection and smallest sample of the secret chagrin and worry to which you have been long and consistently subjected by them.

It is devoutly to be hoped that your wife, as the pivotal figure in the situation, will recognize at once the estimable motives which prompt your questions, and will act instantaneously in their support, during the clan conferences on "future policy" that are bound to ensue. If she is a woman of superior discernment, she will know, without being told, that your worth as a husband is precisely proportionate to (1) your reluctance to be a second-hand pensioner on her family's bounty; and (2) to your involuntary distress at being paternalistically deprived of the manly householder's cherished (and legitimate) prerogatives of domestic privacy, respected authority and responsibility to provide the essentials, as well as occasional luxuries, of life to those under his care.

She would have made a poor choice of life partner, indeed, if her husband nonchalantly took for granted, or tended to count on, a continuous flow of handouts from her family; or if he were such a nonentity as to bow, without protest, to the development of a home situation in which he rates more as a captive of his wife's clan than as a substantial personage whose title to exert a significant influence upon the affairs of his household should be self-evident. The desperate dilemma in which you find yourself stems, ironically, from your civilized conviction that your basic rights in the situation ought to be self-evident to all beholders. Thus, while seeing those rights continuously ignored and trampled under, you nevertheless cannot bring yourself to proclaim their existence and your desire to exercise them, because you shrink from wounding the offenders' feelings.

Yet, as you surmise, things are bound to "turn out badly" for all concerned, unless your wife's family musters the great good sense to adopt a hands-off policy toward your household in future, with no diminution of friendly feeling and loyal interest. If these interpretative remarks should be read by them and work no spontaneous and wise modification of behavior, I would then consider it your wife's obligation to exert all her powers of logic and persuasion to stem the tide of bland interference which rises from her side of the house.

Although she may garner many material gifts and be relieved of much labor, as a result of tolerating her family's domineering patronage, she is at the same time being insidiously robbed of (1) self-reliance; (2) a relationship of deepening comradeship and interdependency with her husband, which is the only form of "family insurance," and (3) the spiritual guardianship of her child, who cannot be expected to venerate her as a source of control and enlightenment, if habitually subjected to the demoralizing confusion of bureaucratic rearing. If she is to be wife and mother worthy of the name, and gradually increase her stature and influence in these incalculably important roles, she must take the initiative in requiring her kinfolk to stand apart, while she and her husband "row their own canoe." ## Overdressing and Extra Pounds Are Called Career Handicaps

By Ida Jean Kain

When the boss arrives at the office wearing an unusually loud shirt and a tie only the color blind could call conservative, you can take it he has a tough day ahead and is trying to give himself a lift.

That is all right for the boss. But unless you are in an executive position yourself, your bright red nail polish is out of place. Who says so? A woman! She is Helen Trimpe, Manhattanite who makes a business of furthering other women's careers and who has made a study of thousands of employer-employe associations to find out what makes for success.

Miss Trimpe vetoes a number of feminine foibles for the business woman who wants to go places—extreme high heels, the uniform black dress affected by so many New Yorkers and overweight.

Happy Medium Heels

Being opposed to very high heels does not mean she favors flat ones. "There should be a happy medium in heels," Miss Trimpe believes. "They should be neither too high nor too low—just comfortable and in good taste."

Her objections to black will make you think twice before adopting it as your basic color. "It is dull, negative, and unbecoming to most women. It is not a gentle color. I think women in business should be more gentle. Black is all right now and then, but not for steady wear."

By the way, this career director has an interesting tip on clothes for the job applicant: "The casual dress a woman is wearing when she reads the advertisement is much more likely to be suitable for answering it than the one in which she dolls up. Overdressing is one of the most common mistakes made by job applicants."

Weight Impressive

Does your weight make any impression on the prospective employer? Miss Trimpe assures me that it does. "If a woman is fat, he assumes that she is indifferent to her appearance and apt to be lazy and careless about her work. But there are comparatively few overweight women in business. They do not last. Now and then one comes to consult me about her career and the first thing I ask is, 'Why are you fat.' As soon as she begins to take her weight down, she spruces up in her appearance. She sits straighter and takes more pride in herself. But, as a rule, business women run to thinness, sometimes to nerves."

Thinness and nerves go together—even the Government recognizes that, and the thin, neurotic girls are being warned not to flock to Washington, D. C., for jobs. The pace is too fast for them. They can't take it.

The more overworked a business girl is, Miss Trimpe has found, the greater her need for calisthenics, preferably the passive kind, such as massage. But as a day-in, day-out antidote to nerve strain she recommends stretching and rolling exercises performed on a pallet on the floor. The reason she thinks they are good is—they have worked out for her.

Stockings Don't Worry Alexis

Hollywood, Calif.—Alexis Smith isn't worried about the stocking situation. She feels that we can either adjust our tastes to rayon or cotton stockings as easily as we can cut down on sugar.

"When everyone is wearing them we'll become so accustomed to them we won't even think of them," she said. "As a matter of fact, there are some very nice patterns in these newer stockings. I really think that the cotton lace stockings are actually glamorous.

"One thing, however, that we have to pay attention to is the care of these stockings. We are all so used to silks and nylons drying out over night. But you cannot wash rayon or cotton stockings at night and expect to put them on dry the next morning. Nor can you dry them near excessive heat."

Your Personal Success

Nerve Symptoms

BROODING, tense! Today there's a strain even on tough nerves; the more delicately strung woman may age visibly.

The strain can be borne, though, when nerves are understood. If you are high strung you have exceptional contributions to make in creative energy, vitality.

But nerves are so often misunderstood; jitters aren't the only "nerve" sympton. Lack of confidence, exhaustion, other feelings also may hint of "nerve" ailments that take a toll of health, looks and personality.

If these symptoms seem bewildering, take comfort in the fact that the course for a nervous person is usually a simple one.

Keep a balance is the first rule. Though your woman's role is "work and wait," find time for your favorite hobby.

Understand your nerves. In our 40-page booklet, a well-known psychiatrist explains causes of "nerves," how to keep on an even keel, acquire serenity. Describes symptoms.

New Fibers Make Carpets Moth-Proof

MISS ARRETTA WATTS

By Martha Ellyn

The Post Household Editor

AS a child did you ever visit Aunt Agatha and find to your bewilderment that her parlor was dark as a dungeon? Dark, because the shades were completely drawn so that not a ray of sunshine would fall on her prized flowered carpet and fade it?

Did you ever watch grandmother placing newspapers beneath the carpets at housecleaning time because she believed this kept the moths out of her carpets?

These practices are now outmoded because chemistry has offered solutions to such annoyances. This was pointed out Miss Arretta Lynch Watts, staff member of the New York office, Public Relations Department of the Dupont Co., who has been in Washington the last week speaking to the home economics classes of the University of Maryland, National Park College, and Chevy Chase Junior College.

Permanent Crispness

Miss Watts told of the development of a new fiber that makes carpets moth proof and fire-resistant. "This new fiber," she said, "has a high degree of permanent crispness, and is being used in the manufacture of rugs, carpets, upholstry and plushes. Colors are clear and lustrous due to the fact that the yarn is white when the dyes are applied."

This new fiber, yet unnamed, is but one of the many ways that chemistry is meeting the needs today in our homes, for clothing and for life in general. Chemical products, such as nylon, plastics, rayon, dyes, cellophane, paints and textile finishes, are all among the products that have fairly revolutionized the home.

The chemists of the duPont Co., through the use of such raw materials as coal, cellulose, vegetable oils, limestone, salt, water and air, have given the home such things as air-conditioning, refrigeration, furniture, new yarns for dress fabrics and house furnishings and countless other items that have additional practicability and economy value.

Tons of chemical developments too are behind every plane, tank and gun built. "The need of these for the armed forces," said Miss Watts, "means fewer fabric materials, fewer accessories, fewer colors, and other shortages in our lives, but rather than complain, we shall have to take care of the things we now have and make them last. Economy will have to be our watch-word."

"Zelan" Important Wrapping

The durable repellant finish, "zelan," which has found many important uses, especially for children's clothing, for rain and sports clothes and decorative products, has now become in wartime tremendously important for the packaging of bandages, compresses, surgical dressings and drugs for both Army and Navy.

This is not only because of its sanitary and moisture-proof qualities, but because it is the most effective wrapping yet found to protect against poison gas. For the same reason it is used to wrap gas masks. Hospitals too are using this "zelan" finish for surgical masks and to cover wet dressings. Delicate instruments and precision tools used in war industries are being shipped in cellophane to reduce chances of their corrosion.

Suspenders Give That Something Girl's Suit Needs

Now to that promised practical note. All of you who have ever worn suits know that, once you've reached the office, the jacket must come off leaving you garbed in plain blouse, plainer skirt and feeling too dullish for words. (Funny how most of the style of a suit is concentrated in jacket and hat.)

But there is one way to give the "look of a dress" to a suit without jacket, a tip from Joan Crawford, a star who practically lives in suits. Joan simply has all her skirts made with suspenders—every style from Bavarian to old-fashioned country "galluses"—these lending the appearance of dress or jumper to plain shirt and skirt. Suspenders may even be used in colors.

Further, Joan says, skirts hung from suspenders, hang better, never twist at the waistline—a boon for the absent-minded who wander about with the placket a good 3 inches off side!

Don't Be 'Leathery' Type In Wartime, Says Expert

By Malvina Lindsay

OUT of the last war emerged the belligerent flapper and the hard-boiled sophisticate. These were merely surface poses, of course, but they caused many women to become rather unpleasant creatures to have around.

However, there are signs now that the feminine aftermath of the present struggle will be a little more on the side of gentility—a word that was nearly laughed out of existence during the cynical 20's. One of these signs is the general tenor of charm and glamour advice, which is veering toward the strive-to-please and even the moral uplift ideals of Victorian days.

A warning to women war workers not to become grim and "leathery" is sounded by Margery Wilson, high priestess of feminine charm in this country, in her new book, "The Woman You Want to Be," published today by Lippincott. However, Miss Wilson does not think women can escape such a fate merely by frequent applications of lipstick. Fundamentals of mental attitude, as well as surface social technique, are needed, she points out, to help women adjust to the present disordered world and the uncertain one ahead.

Be Social Minded

No woman can afford to withdraw to the ivory tower of the home, the office, or even defense duties, Miss Wilson insists. It is her duty to get out and go places and see things—and to get along with and help the persons with whom she comes in contact. As the Victorian female was counseled to be a good influence in some wandering man's life, so Miss Wilson would have the woman of today be a beacon light to society generally. But in order to do this effectively she must not be mincing mannered, persnickety and prudish, as were many of the "good women" of earlier eras, but rather gay, interesting, chic and charming.

"In the coming years," says the author, "we shall need all the charm, aplomb and philosophy we can get. It will be the task of women to keep the world from despond, to keep the prettier gestures of good living going with meager materials. Women will not, for many a year, perhaps never, descend again to the status of toys."

Allure In a Uniform

How to be charming even in a uniform is touched upon in this volume.

"There is no reason," points out the author, "why a lady in a good-looking uniform with a leather belt and boots should think it adds to her job for her to take on a leathery attitude and imagine she must act like Capt. Flagg in What Price Glory? Women, like savages, are natural actors, and there is no doubt of the temptation to hitch up the belt and swear a bit—but if nobody notices them they forget it like naughty children bringing home talk they heard on the street."

For the present Miss Wilson urges that women "be determinedly hospitable" and keep up their normal social activities. The woman who leads an active expansive life, she believes, will not be likely to come out of the war "embittered, drained pessimistic and tired," but rather "disciplined healthier, better adjusted to reality, more inspired and exalted and full of plans for the future."

Feminine voice, speech and conversation are given much emphasis among Miss Wilson's more concrete instructions on charm. This part of the book, particularly the section on the poisonous "I," should be required reading for all patrons of hen parties.

Back From the Fiji Islands American Consul's Wife Says Natives There Are Kindly—'Certainly Not Cannibal'

THE FABULOUS Fiji Islands, once the infamous home of cannibals, is now as law-abiding and as progressive a British crown colony as you'll find anywhere. Sections that formarly thundered with the roll of savage drums are now serene communities; and Suva, the Fiji capital, is studded with gleaming white buildings that bring a strictly modish accent to an ageless group of islands.

So says Mrs. Wainwright Abbott, wife of the American Consul General at Suva. Recently returned to the United States, she arrived in Washington a couple of days ago, for a week's stay at the Fairfax Hotel. And it was there I talked to her briefly yesterday about her experiences in a far-flung domain that has been widely, but not always correctly, publicized.

More than a year ago when Mrs. Abbott accompanied her husband to the South Seas, she had by her own admission all sorts of erroneous ideas about the "man-eating inhabitants" of the strange land to which they were headed.

Hessler Studio.
Mrs. Wainwright Abbott

BUT SHE SOON discovered that most accounts of the country are far-fetched, and stem from more fancy than fact. "Actually, the people of Fiji are the nicest, kindliest people you can imagine," she said. "You like them at once. And you know most of your pre-conceived ideas about them are wrong."

She spoke of the magnificent physique of the natives ("they're tall, strongly built, and bronze,") she said, and their picturesque types of dress; and then she got around to talking about the Fiji Islander's most distinctive feature—his frizzy mop of hair; "the bushier, the better."

"Both the men and women are proud of their hair and take special pains with it," she went on. "No fashionable American woman is more concerned with her coiffeur than is the Fiji belle, who brushes her locks with the greatest of care and frequently sleeps with her hair tightly rolled to the final wisp."

Mrs. Abbott mentioned also that the current style in feminine Fiji hair-dos dictates that bright red is the favored color. The women have found that a lime solution will turn the trick (and the shade) in short order; so the sight of Fiji matrons and maidens stepping out with their heads completely covered with lime has come to be a familiar sight around those parts.

MRS. ABBOTT found the islands as a whole "utterly fascinating," and was loathe to leave even when government orders called for the evacuation of so many provided no choice for her. Early in January she sailed to New Zealand, where she spent some time with friends, and then came on to San Francisco. Mr. Abbott remained at his post in Suva, but exactly how, and when, his pretty wife completed her return trip to America is another of those official secrets.

Just now she's renewing acquaintances with scores of friends in Washington. A couple of years ago, when she came over from Hamburg, where her husband was then serving as American Consul, she stayed here for several weeks, was widely entertained and promised all her friends she would be back later for a longer visit.

"But that can't be at this time," she wailed yesterday, "because, much as I'd like to, I can't find a place to stay here—not longer than a week anyway." From Washington she will go to New York to spend a few days and then will spend some time with her mother-in-law. There may be a return trip to the Capital later in the season, but she's making no promises.

BORN IN LAPLAND, Mrs. Abbott has lived in many far-flung countries, but says she's always "glad to get back to America," and that Washington now seems to be the world's crossroads, where you once more meet everybody you've ever known. Attractive and gracious, Mrs. Abbott talks easily and well on almost any subject you can mention, and she can do it in five languages—Swedish, English, French, German and Spanish.

As would be expected, she is to be entertained at a number of parties during her current visit. "But maybe we'd better not go into that, times being what they are," she said thoughtfully. "Perhaps when, and if, I come back . . ."

ANOTHER WOMAN recently returning to Washington, as a result of evacuation orders in a British possession, is Mrs. Alexander Powell. Since last summer she has spent much time in Bermuda with her daughter, Lady Monson; but she is now back in the Capital for an indefinite stay.

Currently making her headquarters at the apartment of Mrs. Randolph Meade, sister of Admiral James Meade, commander of United States naval forces in Bermuda, Mrs. Powell expects to be joined soon by Lady Monson's three children. They are scheduled to come from Bermuda soon to be with her for the duration. Lady Monson, meanwhile, is awaiting transportation from the island to England where she will join Lord Monson.

Before going to Bermuda, Mrs. Powell leased Journey's End, her Maryland residence, to Capt. and Mrs. Andrew E. Van Esso. At present she is completing arrangements to take a farm in Virginia which will amply accommodate her three young refugee grandchildren this summer.

Mrs. Powell returned to the States early in December, expecting to go back to Bermuda within a short time. Since America's declaration of war, however, all American women were ordered evacuated from Bermuda, and she remained in New York until a short time ago when she came to Washington.

Many Parties Will Precede Gala Navy Relief Ball Tomorrow

"After the ball is over" there'll be a substantial addition to the Navy Relief Fund, but before the ball begins, there will be numerous gay supper parties. The event in question, of course, is the Northern Virginia Navy Relief Ball tomorrow night at the Army-Navy Country Club.

Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin will entertain more than 50 guests on the terrace of her apartment at the Shoreham Hotel. Among them will be the Venezuelan Ambassador and Senora de Escalante, the Australian Minister and Mrs. Herbert Vere Evatt, Senator Theodore F. Green, Sir Anthony and Lady Rumbold, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Watson, Mrs. Patrick Hurley, Rear Admiral W. H. P. Blandy and Mrs. Blandy, Rear Admiral Harold G. Bowen and Mrs. Bowen, and Mr. and Mrs. Adlai Stevenson.

Also on Mrs. Goodwin's guest list are Miss Emily Myers, Miss Jane Culbertson, Mrs. Keeney Phillips and Mrs. Robert Davidson.

In Fairfax at their home, Whitehouse, Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Richardson will entertain Mr. and Mrs. Rixey Smith, Col. and Mrs. H. W. T. Eglin, Col. and Mrs. H. L. Dufreene, Mrs. Blanche Day, Mr. and Mrs. Prew Savoy, Mrs. Adeline Serre, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Hoover, Maj. and Mrs. Charles Pozer, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Peter, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Howrey, Mrs. Lenning Sweet and Royal Firman.

William H. Lipscomb will be host at a large party in Middleburg, and Mrs. Mattie Wyatt Porter will entertain a party of eight at dinner prior to the ball. Mrs. Frank Mason Dillard, of Alexandria, is arranging a party of more than 20 guests who will attend the ball, and throughout northern Virginia, in Warrenton, Middleburg, Manassas, Leesburg, Fredericksburg, Alexandria and Fairfax, parties will go on the boards before the gala ball.

Miss Hanson Is Engaged

Commander E. Greenwood Hanson, U. S. Navy, retired, and Mrs. Hanson announce the engagement of their daughter, Patricia Marie, to Cadet Henry Harmeling, jr., son of Col. Harmeling, U. S. Army, and Mrs. Harmeling, of Garden City, Long Island.

The ceremony will take place in the sacristy of St. Matthew's Cathedral, May 30, with an informal buffet supper to follow at the apartment of the bride's parents at the Dorchester House.

Miss Nancy Ould Honored at Shower

Many parties have been given for Miss Nancy Ould, bride-elect, who will walk down the aisle of Potomac Heights Community Church Friday to exchange vows with Frank Wilton Fields, jr. Last night's fete, however, was different from the others. It was, literally, a "family shower."

Mrs. L. S. Stewart, the bride-elect's aunt, was hostess at her home in Silver Spring for the fete and her guests were almost entirely "family." Miss Ould, who is the daughter of Mrs. David K. Correll, had an exciting and busy time, for in order to find her presents, she had to burst numerous balloons which contained the cues to their hiding places.

Mrs. Stewart's guest list included Mrs. L. B. Culp, Mrs. Edwin Simons, Mrs. Stewart Culp, Mrs. Jack Culp, Mrs. Hewitt Stewart, Miss Barbara Stewart, Mrs. Frank Stewart, Mrs. Lewis Woltz, Mrs. Bill Eastman, Mrs. B. Ould, Mrs. W. O. Allen, Mrs. B. A. Stewart and Mrs. Allan Marceron. The bride's mother was also among those present.

A literal preview in miniature of Friday's wedding, even to the color and style of the bridesmaid's gowns, marched down the table at a shower last weekend given for Miss Ould. Mrs. Samuel P. Hatchett and Mrs. Ben Catching were cohostesses for the fete, and about 50 guests gathered to shower the bride-elect with miscellaneous and personal gifts.

Envoy Describes New Zealand's Social Program Before Women's Democratic Club

UPON returning to civilian life after the war, New Zealand youths, who have had to interrupt their education to fight, will find that they can take up where they left off. This is part of the country's rehabilitation program, according to the Minister from New Zealand, Walter G. Nash, guest speaker at the Woman's National Democratic Club luncheon yesterday.

"Whenever possible," said the envoy, "the youth will be given a chance to continue his studies in whatever field he chooses. We want the soldier to find a definite place for himself in a peacetime world. This goes for jobs and careers as well as making possible additional training."

WALTER NASH

MRS JUSTIN MILLER

Insofar as possible, there will be no soldiers returning to nothing, explained the Minister. He told of the rehabilitation bill that is now being worked out in his country to prevent it.

Providing for the soldiers' future is only part of the well-planned social security programs now tremendously effective in that small country.

For example, Mr. Nash pointed out, that the philosophy behind the social security bill, which he piloted through the House in March, 1938 (effective April, 1939), was to take care of the aged, the ailing, babies and those who work.

"The aged," he said, "are looked after for their past services, the babies for their future contributions, the sick because they can not do for themselves, and the workers because of their contributions."

After 60 years of age, a couple receives $15 a week or $7 apiece. The couple or person can own a home, have a savings account but cannot spend more than $5 apiece more than the pension granted, according to the alert, personable envoy, who cited statistics to show the amount the widow and child, the invalid and the unemployed receive in benefits.

Hospitalization, medical and maternity care, free college and university training, are a few of the benefits New Zealand provides.

Everybody's income, except that of those receiving benefits, is taxed 5 per cent in normal times. Now there's an additional 5 per cent war tax. In some cases, incomes are taxed 87 per cent.

The envoy's speech was one of a series of "Information Hour" programs given by the club this year. Mrs. Justin Miller is chairman of the education committee presenting the program.

Mrs. Curtis Shears, president of the club, opened the meeting, presented Mrs. Miller, who in turn introduced Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, of the Social Security Board. Mrs. Woodward introduced the guest speaker.

Honored guest of the day was Mrs. Nash, wife of the speaker. Other guests at the head table were: Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Claude Porter, Mrs. Roland S. Vale, Mrs. Harry Mitchell, Mrs. A. F. Land, Mrs. Edmund Wilson, Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. Pat Harrison and several others.

AP Agrees To Ease Rule On Franchises

By the Associated Press

New York, April 20.—Changes in the bylaws of the Associated Press, largest, nonprofit, cooperative news-gathering organization in the world, to meet new and changing conditions were approved today by more than four-fifths of the member newspapers' representatives.

Requirements of admission to membership were liberalized upon the recommendation of the board of directors who advised the A.P.'s annual meeting that "the Department of Justice has declared, through a series of communications to the officers of this corporation and in personal interviews following an examination of the bylaws of the Associated Press, that they are in violation of the provisions of the Sherman Antitrust Law."

In a preface to their recommended amendments, the board said that "this corporation, through its officers and directors, has been placed on notice that certain changes must be made in its method of electing members or that it will incur the risk of proceedings in the courts, which if successful, could have the effect of bringing about the dissolution of the corporation, thus jeopardizing the existing rights of all members and impairing the value of their newspaper properties."

Associated Press member editors and publishers from all sections of the country participated in an all-afternoon discussion of the proposed changes.

The amendments approved eliminate the historic right of protest of original Associated Press newspaper members in the same field (morning, evening or Sunday) and instead, provided for payments to them by new members under a formula calculated to reimburse the original members on a basis of the value of their Associated Press membership.

9000 D. C. Firms to Register For Sugar Ration April 28-29

An estimated 9000 District business firms classified as industrial users or commercial distributors of sugar, will go to seven designated schools on April 28 and 29, and register for their sugar rationing books, Lawson J. Cantrell, rationing supervisor, announced yesterday. Consumer registration will follow on May 4, 5, 6 and 7.

To facilitate the "trade" registration program, Cantrell issued the first of a series of bulletins of instructions, and strongly advised business men to secure and fill in, but not sign, the complicated forms before this date. These blanks, he pointed out, require the registrant's referring to his accounts of the past year, and for this reason they are made available now. There will be two types of blanks for members of the above classifications.

Industrial users include restaurant owners, and confectioners, bakers, and others who convert sugar into products for distribution. Commercial distributors embrace wholesale and retail grocers, and boarding houses if the owners of the latter so decide.

The boarding house owners who prefer to register as distributors will thus eliminate the need of their tenants registering. Should they prefer to wait and have their roomers register as consumers, it will be necessary for them to collect every week the individual stamps to secure their quota since the stamps are valueless if not used in the week prescribed.

Asked if landlords registering as distributors would work hardship on the tenants, if, as rumored, the stamps might be used for rationing other commodities, Cantrell said that while he knew nothing of the reports, such a procedure would unduly complicate distribution.

Business men registering on April 28 and 29 must declare the supply of sugar they have on hand and stamps for new supplies will not be issued until this is used up. In addition they must show at the end of every month by records or by the collection of stamps that have been turned into them by consumers that their supply is used up. Misrepresentation of facts at either time, as stated on the blanks, is a criminal offense, punishable by fine and imprisonment.

The rationing supervisor said in closing that the consumer rationing registration that is to take place early in May will not be so involved and instructions with the times and places for registration will be made public before then.

Wide Powers Proposed for Raid Workers

Fear that Washington may soon be the target of aerial attack was reflected in a bill introduced in the House yesterday giving vastly increased power to local civilian defense workers and at the same time raising the District's emergency defense fund from one million dollars to $1,600,000.

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, introduced the measure at the suggestion of the District Commissioners.

As explained by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, the measure amending the original Randolph blackout bill permits the District to take adequate steps toward the protection of persons and property and also settles the question of the validity of the present civilian defense organization.

May Seize Private Property

Most important item of the bill is that it gives local defense officials sweeping powers to seize any private property considered necessary for civilian protection.

The bill states local defense officials may "requisition, enter upon, take possession of and use private property of every kind and nature and any rights therein as may in their opinion be necessary for the location, installation, maintenance and operation of facilities and devices suitable for definite purposes . . ."

Further the bill authorizes the Commissioners in their capacity as directors of the civilian defense program "to ascertain and pay just compensation for such use of private property, and if the amount of compensation so determined be not satisfactory (to the owner) such property may be used immediately and such (property owner) will be paid 50 per cent of the amount" at which the property is evaluated with the right to sue the District for the remainder.

Under the bill the Commissioners would have the discretion to spend up to $100,000 for hospital and other medical expenses for civilian defense workers injured in the line of duty.

It is specified in the measure that the owner of an auto being used by a volunteer in civilian defense work can not be held responsible for any accidents occuring while his auto is in use in defense activities.

Would Halt Suits

At the same time the bill would not permit a private citizen to sue a volunteer worker while he is carrying out his appointed duties.

Virtual powers of conscription of District government employes to do defense work are granted the Commissioners in the bill, which states they are authorized "to use such regular employes of the government of the District of Columbia as they deem necessary."

The far-reaching effects of the measure are seen in the affirmation that the Commissioners have whatever power "they deem necessary" for civilian protection "without regard to the provisions of any other law."

The additional $600,000 to be granted the District from Federal funds will be paid back, the bill states, without interest, over a period of ten years.

Army's Civilian Protection Class Includes 2 D. C. Women

Two Washington women enrolled yesterday at the opening of the War Department's Civilian Protection School of the Army Chemical Warfare Service, recently transferred from Edgewood Arsenal to the University of Maryland at College Park.

Being the only women in the class of 30 persons who enrolled, the two members of the fair sex were immediately chosen as honorary presidents. They are Miss Mary Mason, assistant chief air-raid warden of the metropolitan defense area, and Mrs. Nelle Holmes, private secretary to Col. Lemuel Bolles, metropolitan civilian defense director.

The students, who are defense workers chosen to attend the school by their respective home-defense councils, are from Washington, Maryland, Virginia, New York, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania and South Carolina. The school will continue for the duration, with new classes starting every two weeks.

Each class will last ten days, with Army Chemical Warfare Service officers as instructors in decontamination work, the handling of incendiary fires and the organization and operation of civilian defense control centers.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, gave a brief welcoming address at the opening of the course yesterday and later accompanied Maj. Gen. W. N. Porter, chief of the Chemical Warfare Service, on a tour of the new school, which is to be under the direction of Col. Thomas H. McHattan.

Lieut. William Malley of the New York City police department, who was elected president of the class, urged his fellow students to buckle down and study in order to set a high standard in the final examinations for other classes to follow. Most of the members of the class are staying at the Rossbourgh Inn and the Lord Calvert Inn, both at College Park.

D. C. Service Men Win Recognition

Two Washington boys, Private John P. Meade, who resides at 2315 Fortieth Place Northwest, and Private Christian Kopf, whose home is at 1309 P Street Northwest, have been singled out for special recognition in the Army, The Post learned yesterday.

Kopf is beginning a 12-week training course at Fort Knox, which when completed will qualify him for duty in the Armored Divisions. Meade has been selected to attend the Coast Artillery Officer Candidates' School at Camp Davis, N. C., which leads to a commission as second lieutenant.

Steam Raid Horn To Get Test Today

District residents were notified that the District's second steam horn will sound off from the top of the District Building at 10 a. m. today.

The third of these horns will be tried out from the new War Department Building sometime between 1 and 2 o'clock this afternoon. The first of these devices was sounded from the Potomac Electric Power Company Building on Saturday.

When all 20 of these steam horns are installed they will, together with the 21 air horns ordered, form the District's major air-raid warning system. The 38 electric sirens now functioning are regarded by defense officials as inadequate, and will only be used as an auxiliary system.

Mason Will Address Women's Salvage Unit

Commissioner Guy D. Mason will address a meeting of the women's division of the District Salvage for Victory today at 8:15 p. m. in the United States Chamber of Commerce auditorium, Mrs. Newton Wing, division chairman, announced yesterday.

Every Washington women's organization is expected to send representatives to the meeting at which plans will be drafted for the extension of the salvage program here, Mrs. Wing said.

D. C. Dealer Indicted In Illegal Tire Sales

D. C. Thefts Boost Tire Toll to 300

Nearly 300 precious tires have been stolen from cars parked on Washington streets since the tire rationing order went into effect early in January, it was learned yesterday.

Latest to be reported was the theft of seven tires taken from four brand-new cars parked on a storage lot at 1611 New York Avenue Northwest.

Lost tires cannot be replaced by citizens unless they come under certain regulations of the tire rationing board, a fact which rules out the average person.

To assist citizens and police in their efforts to locate their property a Nation-wide file of tire serial numbers is being gathered. The work is being done by the Automobile Underwriter's Detective Bureau.

Washington police are cooperating with this plan which it is believed will help trace down tires when they are taken to other States for disposal.

Sheldon W. Fairchild, representative of this concern, has been making frequent trips to Washington from the central office in New York for the purpose of gathering this data.

He said that all insurance companys granting "theft" insurance are asking policyholders to submit serial numbers of their tires, radios, heaters, etc.

Joseph A. Wheeler, of the Mandell Chevrolet Co., told police yesterday that seven tires had been taken from four new cars on a storage lot at 1611 New York Avenue. He said that there are nearly 100 new cars on the lot, immobilized by rationing, and that they are under the constant care of a watchman.

At the same time Lieut. Herbert F. Krohn, Army officer stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va., reported a tire stolen from his car parked on a lot at 219 Second Street Northwest.

Earl J. Schrock, 161 Kentucky Avenue Southeast, told police there were three tires missing from his automobile. It had been stolen and was later recovered minus three wheels.

Dale Harris, 3619 Thirty-seventh Street Northwest, reported a wheel taken from his auto parked in front of his house.

Transfers Parley

New York, April 20 (AP).—The National Society of Daughters of the American Colonists announced today that because of war emergency conditions in Washington the annual assembly April 24 and 25, would be transferred to Philadelphia.

Hundley Accused Of Faking Reports, Inspector's Marks

Hiram B. Hundley, Washington tire dealer doing business under the name of "Ben Hundley," was indicted by a special grand jury yesterday on charges of making fraudulent reports to the Government concerning the sale of automobile tires and tubes.

The indictment, containing 12 counts, charged Hundley with making a false report on the number of tires and tubes he had in stock when the tire rationing program went into effect; marking a substantial number of new tires and tubes as used and therefore salable under rationing regulations; and placing chalk marks on tires with the representation that the marks were put there by authorized Government inspectors.

Fake Bookkeeping Charged

Hundley is also charged with "covering up" transactions by maintaining a running inventory in which he made "fictitious entries and omissions."

Cited as a fictitious entry is a sales record indicating that 288 new tires had been sold to Walton Tire Co., 639 North Broad Street, Philadelphia, which Hundley is charged with making up to show that he sold that number of tires at wholesale prices to another dealer. This, the indictment charged, was to conceal that the tires were sold to other purchasers.

Hundley is listed in the indictment, which was returned to Judge T. Allen Goldsborough in District Court, as doing business at 3446 Fourteenth Street Northwest, and 621 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

Steep Penalties Provided

Maximum penalties on each of the 12 counts are a fine of $10,000 or imprisonment for 10 years, or both.

The indictment is the first of its kind returned in the District of Columbia and the fifth in the country.

Hundley is alleged to have sold 750 new tires, marked used, to three customers: Diamond Service Co., 400; the Evening Star Publishing Co., 250, and Radio Cab, 100. In the last case, actual delivery was said to have been made to Premier Purchasing Co.

A yellow chalk notation "OK-JMC" was made on new tires, the Government charged, to indicate that a Government inspector had authorized the sale of such a tire, without restrictions, because the mileage was in excess of 1000 miles.

The Federal District Court grand jury which investigated the case began its study last Janary. The case was handled by Robert L. Wright, special Assistant Attorney General, and Assistant United Attorney John J. Leahy.

3 Indicted in Alleged Tire, Car Theft Ring

Three men were indicted by the District Court grand jury yesterday on charges of stealing and receiving stolen automobile parts, tires and tubes in a series of allegedly joint operations. The indictments were among 30 returned by the grand jury.

Arnold C. Garrett, 24, of 4815 Fourteenth Street Northwest, was charged with receiving a stolen tire, tube and wheel, and with larceny of five other tires, five tubes, five wheels and an automobile. Thomas R. Kerschner, 18, of 3563 Warder Street Northwest, was charged with the theft of five tires, five tubes, five wheels and an automobile in the indictment charging Garnett with larceny.

Kelly Orders:

Crackdown In Traffic Violations

Perturbed at the "alarming increase" of traffic fatalities here since the first of the year, with a corresponding breakdown in enforcement of traffic regulations, Superintendent of Police Edward Kelly yesterday cracked down on the force's "apparent indifference" to the situation.

In the congested downtown area particularly, he said, "pedestrians are observed generally to walk in total disregard of pedestrian control regulations, even at corners where uniformed officers are on duty.

"Cars weave in and out of traffic, violate red lights, and stop signs, turn without giving proper signals and from the wrong lane, pull away from the curb without warning. Taxicabs stop wherever and whenever they like to pick up or discharge passengers in utter disregard of other vehicles or pedestrians.

"The general tendency to drive faster than is reasonable and proper under existing conditions at the time is very noticeable, as is the tendency to drive at slow speeds in the center lane of the roadway so that other traffic cannot pass from the rear, and many other serious moving violations of the regulations which experience has shown to be a frequent cause of accidents, are being freely indulged in all over the city."

To date there have been 40 traffic deaths in the District as compared with 36 for the same date last year. This was pointed out to all policemen, especially the men on motorcycles and in scout cars. He ordered them to "exert every effort to bring about a better compliance with the traffic regulations in the interests of increased convenience and safety on the streets."

Maj. Kelly reminded policemen that there are "thousands of persons operating cars in the District who are unfamiliar with local regulations and in many instances with city driving. The streets are greatly overcrowded both with pedestrians and vehicles," he said, "and it is absolutely essential that every policeman give every possible attention to traffic and that he be alert and attentive to duty and take prompt and effective action whenever these dangerous violations are observed."

He warned that supervisory personnel will make frequent checks and observations of the traffic conditions on the streets and the work of their subordinates, and see that the men are giving their attention to these matters.

It is hoped, he said, that this action will halt the "decided increase in serious traffic violations which at the present is accompanied by an apparent indifference on the part of the police and a failure to take action with respect to enforcement."

Parking Ban Is Expanded

Swelling of auto traffic in Southwest Washington resulting from the opening of a number of war emergency "tempo" buildings led yesterday to the imposing of new parking restrictions on eight streets in that area by the District Commissioners.

The restrictions, which were recommended by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, forbid parking "at any time" on the streets included in the order. In addition, Second Street will be limited to southbound traffic only from P to V Streets.

The complete list of restrictions is as follows:

Delaware Avenue—No parking at any time on the west side from O to P Streets.
O Street—No parking at any time on the north side from Maine Avenue to First Street.
P Street—No parking at any time on either side from Delaware Avenue to First Street.
T Street—No parking at any time on either side from Canal Street to First Street.
V Street—No parking at any time from Canal Street to First Street.
First Street—No parking at any time on the east side from O to V Street.
Second Street—No parking at any time on the west side from P to V Street.
Fourth Street—No parking at any time on the east side from O to P Street.

Artis, corresponding secretary; Hubert P. Pair, treasurer, and Nathan A. Dobbins, George E. C. Hayes, George A. Parker and Thurman L. Dobson, members of the exeecutive committee.

Man Who Posed As Auto Permit Inspector Fined

Frank F. Hartwell, of Brentwood, Md., was fined $50 by Judge Walter J. Casey in Police Court yesterday for soliciting fees in the vicinity of the new District Building on the representation that he was authorized to assist persons seeking driving permits.

Complainant was J. T. Marshall, 617 M Street Southwest, who told the court he paid Hartwell $1 under the impression that the defendant was an inspector authorized to give a preliminary test. Assistant Corporation counsel William C. Martin declared in court that police reports indicate the practice is quite common here.

Detroit Man Aided Nazi Flee, FBI Says

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 20 — Escape of a German army combat pilot from an officers concentration camp in Canada was made possible through cooperation of Max Stephan, German-born proprietor of a Detroit restaurant, the FBI announced today.

Stephan, a naturalized American citizen, admitted giving the German flier food and money and arranging his transportation out of Detroit Sunday morning, John S. Bugas, Detroit FBI chief, declared.

The flier, Peter Krug, 21-year-old lieutenant in the German air force, escaped from the camp April 16 with a companion, Erich Bohle, 23, also a lieutenant. Bohle was recaptured the following day at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

One Still At Large

Krug, still at large, is believed trying to make his way back to Germany by way of Mexico and South America, Bugas said.

Arraigned before United States Commissioner J. Stanley Hurd, Stephan, charged specifically with unlawfully concealing and harboring an alien, stood mute and a plea of innocent was entered for him. An examination was set for April 27. Stephan was unable to post $25,000 bond.

A woman of German descent, who hid Krug in her home here Saturday night, Bugas said, also is under arrest. Her name was not divulged. Bugas said he would ask her internment for the duration of the war.

Paddles Across River

Krug, captured after being shot down in a dogfight over the English Channel a year and a half ago, made his way to Toronto, then to Windsor after breaking out of the camp.

He stole a rowboat in Windsor Friday night, the FBI officer related, and, using boards for oars, paddled across the Detroit River.

He then made his way to the home of the woman whose name he had memorized from bundles she had sent to prisoners at the camp. She hid him, Bugas said, and notified Stephan.

Stephan came to this country from Germany in 1923 and was naturalized in 1935. Bugas said Stephan was associated with the German-American Bund and added that the society held a meeting Sunday night at the restaurant.

Sailor Pulls Dazed Man From Path Of Speeding Train

Quick thinking on the part of a sailor probably saved the life of Lloyd A. Jones, 37, of Laurel, Md., whose car was destroyed by a train Sunday night only a few miles from the point where two Berwyn Heights youths were killed by a train the night before.

According to Officer Boyd Hamilton, of the Prince Georges police, Jones was driving to his home when a large trailer van slowed in front of him near Ammendale. Jones swerved from the highway and lost control of the car. The car jumped an embankment, cleared the southbound rails, and came to a stop on the northbound tracks.

Jones was sitting dazed behind the wheel when Charles J. Weidman, 25, 1016 L Street Northwest, a sailor attached to the Bureau of Supply and Accounts, who was changing a tire nearby, heard the train approaching and rushed over to pull Jones from the car. A few seconds later, the train crushed the auto.

Except for a few scratches about the face, Jones was uninjured.

'Temporary' U.S. Help Eligible for Automatic Raises

Government war workers formerly classified as "temporary" employes are eligible for automatic promotions under the Ramspeck-Meade act, according to a ruling by Comptroller General Lindsay Warren.

Employes originally hired for six months but later reclassified by the Civil Service Commission as war workers to serve for the duration by the act benefit on and after April 1, the comptroller general held.

Warren's ruling was made in reply to a query by Secretary of the Navy Knox.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

New War Agencies Will Get Space

Opposition of war officials to the plan to move new war agencies out of the city apparently will mean that many more old-line bureaus will be decentralized. But whether new or old agencies will be sacrificed, it's now becoming apparent to all that decentralization has become a very serious problem. One high official yesterday estimated that 20,000 employes must be moved out within the next six months. He went on to explain that the saturation point had just about been reached in Washington and from now on, he predicted, two employes would be sent out for every three new employes brought here. Moreover, the high official said, it will be the policy of the Administration to decentralize until the Government has moved its offices out of all apartment houses here.

Yesterday 1000 employes of the Veterans Administration were ordered transferred to New York City on June 1. Veterans is an old-line agency but its employes affected by the move are mainly new war workers. Only the National Service Life Insurance section of the Premium Acounts and Collection Division will be transferred. This section writes insurance for the men in the Army and it's expanding daily. It will eventually hire 2000 additional employes in New York. The New York office will be located at 346 Broadway.

Budget Director Harold Smith, who ordered the transfer, said that Veterans staff here would be "frozen" at 6300 employes after July 1. At one time the transfer of many old-line employes was considered but the proposal was dropped for the time being. Hereafter, Veterans must expand in the field and not in Washington. Employes slated for transfer will be given questionnaires on their availability to move. Those who can't move will be transferred to other jobs here. Applications for transfer can be made at 801 E Street Northwest, the decentralization unit of the Civil Service Commission.

Older Agencies to Move

The President must decide whether the new or old agencies must move. A recommendation was made yesterday to the powerful space control committee that old-line agencies be compelled to do all the decentralizing. The space committee now must go to the President. Last week, as reported here, Office of Emergency Management, War Production Board and several other new war agencies were making plans to move some of their divisions to New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, and Boston. In fact, some officials at WPB are insisting that the move be made. Others object on the ground that it would be unwise to move any bureau until after the war policy of the Nation is firmly fixed.

Sidney Hillman, who has been appointed labor adviser to the President, won't accept the job according to his intimates. He's on an extended vacation and it's expected to be extended for the duration . . . Look for the appointment of Gen. Frank J. McSherry as executive director of the new man power commission. McSherry is now Paul McNutt's director of war training. Several weeks ago the Army ordered McSherry to the battlefront and McNutt is reported to have gotten the order stayed until the man power commission was created. Now that McNutt is man power boss, he can be expected to use McSherry as his top man . . . Federal Deposit Insurance employes who can't go to Chicago will be given jobs here in the office of the Alien Property Custodian.

Anna Rosenberg will wield plenty of power in the new man power commission. Some believe she'll be appointed an assistant administrator. Mrs. Rosenberg was instrumental in getting the job for McNutt . . . Government employes can expect to be among the first group asked to buy war bonds with 10 per cent of their income. Treasury employes, of course, will be the very first to volunteer. Every one will be urged to volunteer . . . Maritime Commission appears to be a cinch to get that space in Baltimore for its regional office but the Social Security Board insists that it be given the office . . . Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming is a good bet to be appointed to the man power commission . . . Civil Service wants radio inspectors . . . Dr. George E. Holm, senior chemist of the Bureau of Chemistry, yesterday was awarded the 1942 Borden medal for his research work on milk. Among other things he's working on whole milk powder that can be shipped to the Allies.

Registrars Are Warned

Maj. Edward Kelly, superintendent of police, told all precinct commanders yesterday that any who have not been sworn in yet as registrars had better hurry up and do so as next Monday is registration day for men between the ages of 44 and 64 years. The officers must sign up any prisoners they have in the clink at that time.

Lincoln Park Citizens Frown On Annexation

Opposition to the McCarran plan to return Arlington County and Alexandria, Va., to the District was voted last night by the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, meeting at Bryan School, Thirteenth and B Streets Southeast.

The organization held that the move, proposed by Chairman McCarran, of the District Senate Committee, would jeopardize existing cordial relations between the District and Virginia.

In other resolutions, the association scored the "laxity" of police enforcement of the dog license law, asked the Police Department to take steps against washing and repairing of automobiles on the streets and expressed disapproval of proposed establishment of a subway system.

Also voted was a protest against the reported contemplated retirement of Police Capt. Joseph Morgan, commander of the Fifth Precinct.

Another resolution suggested that Washington police be equipped with safety cords for their revolvers to prevent the weapons from being snatched by lawbreakers.

Sixteenth Street Heights

Maintaining that the immediate availability of beer and liquor interferes with the "fighting ability of the armed forces," the Sixteenth Street Heights Citizens' Association last night urged the Congress' speedy passage of the Sheppard bill.

The bill prohibits the sale of alcoholic beverages in restricted areas around Army encampments and posts.

The association met at the Shepherd School, Fourteenth Street and Kalmia Road Northwest. The citizens adopted also a resolution calling upon the District traffic department to correct the parking and traffic problems in the shopping area at Kalmia Road and Alaska Avenue Northwest.

Unidentified Man Killed in Virginia By D. C. Motorist

An unidentified man about 45 was killed instantly on route 211 about 4 miles from the town of Fairfax, Va., last night, when he was struck by an automobile driven by Julian W. Holland, jr., 22, of 1123 E Street Northeast, police reported.

Holland told officers investigating the accident that the man stepped into the path of his auto as he was driving east opposite the Fairfax High School, and that he had no opportunity to apply his brakes or swerve his auto.

In Washington, William K. Martin, 78, of 4236 Fortieth Street Northwest, was seriously hurt by an automobile last night as he walked across Wisconsin Avenue Northwest in the 3600 block. He was taken to Emergency Hospital with a possible hip fracture and severe lacerations and suffering from shock. Police listed James Greenwell, 21, of Bethesda, Md., as driver of the automobile.

Organists' Guild Opens Third Festival

By Ray C. B. Brown

D. C. Chapter American Guild of Organists (Ruth F. Vanderlip, dean) opens the third annual festival of organ music Monday night in the Washington Chapel of Latter-Day Saints. Artists: Robert Ruckman, organist; Lewis Corning Atwater, organist; Florence Sindell, soprano; Mabel Flehr, contralto; George Myers, tenor; John H. Marville, basso.

Auditors filled the chapel of Latter-Day Saints last evening as guests of the local chapter of the American Guild of Organists at the opening of the third annual festival of organ music which will continue Wednesday and Saturday nights and close on April 29 with a recital by Virgil Fox in Washington Cathedral. There can be no doubt that the festival plan has increased public interest in the organ as an instrument and in the vast literature of organ music, which is little known in comparison with symphonic and chamber music. Many who have been accustomed to the organ only as an adjunct of the church service are beginning to realize the great resources of the one solo instrument that is capable of sounding with a single voice or in the full polyphony of an orchestra.

Brown

Robert Ruckman, organist of Epworth Methodist Church, played the short recital which opened last evening's program. His choice for a first number fell upon Carl McKinley's transcription of a six-movement suite from Handel's "Water Music." This was a happy selection because orchestral patrons are already familiar with either Harty's or Stokowski's transcriptions of this work, and there was an opportunity to observe how well the organ conveys the color and the dynamics of the music.

Next came the beautifully flowing long melody of the Andante Cantable from Widor's fifth symphony as an example of the organ's eloquence in song, and Sigfird Karg's "Legend of the Mountain," to illustrate the combinations of tints and tonal masses in descriptive music. The recital closed with a remarkable chorale improvisation on "O For a Closer Walk With God," by the American composer, Leon Verrees, who has imagination and skill in registration.

The second half of the program was devoted to excerpts from synagogue services by several composers, sung by the mixed quartet from the Washington Hebrew Congregation, with Lewis Corning Atwater at the organ. To give the vocalists a resting pause, Mr. Atwater played three solos, Edward Stark's "Interlude on a Traditional Melody" and "Jewish Melody" and "Prayer" by Ernest Bloch.

"Sh'ma Yisroel' was intoned in the setting by the German-American composer, Max Spicker, who died in New York in 1912. "Mi Chomocho" was presented in two settings, one by Spicker and the other by the living American composer, Frederick Jacobi. "V'shoh'ru" was sung in the Sparger-Dworzan version and "Kol Nidre" in Stark's arrangement. Zavel Zilberts, Russian-American composer living in New York, was represented by a moving setting of "Let the Words of My Mouth and the Meditations of My Heart."

Most interesting from the standpoint of structure and harmonic texture were "Ke'dusha" as set by the Russian-American composer, Isadore Freed, and "Adon' olom" as set by the English-American composer, Ferdinand Dunkley, of New Orleans. Freed's music is inherently Jewish in thematic character and in spiritual poignancy, while Dunkley's is partly in the Semitic tradition and partly Occidental both in melodic line and harmonic base.

D. C. Devises Awards for Raid Heroes

Principal candidate for the first civilian defense merit award appeared last night to be the Central Labor Union, as the District Commissioners set up awards for defense work.

The Central Labor Union has pledged $150,000 to be given to the District for civilian defense purposes; $70,000 of this amount is already in a trust fund to be used at the discretion of the District Commissioners and Civilian Defense officials. Blood banks for District hospitals, and ambulance-scout cars for all police precincts are the first expenditures authorized from this fund.

The Civilian Defense Committee on Citations and Awards, set up by United States Coordinator for Civilian Defense in the District, John Russell Young, announced yesterday that the following kinds of awards will be made:

A medal to any member of the protective service who distinguishes himself under actual hostile attack by extraordinary heroism at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty.

A certificate of merit to members whose conduct under attack is extraordinarily heroic, but not under such conditions as would warrant the award of the medal, or whose conduct is equally heroic but not during attack, or who have performed exceptionally meritoriously a duty of great responsibility; to persons not in the civilian defense organization whose actions at any time are extraordinarily heroic, or to an organization whose contribution to the civilian-defense program is considered exceptionally meritorious.

A citation in the official publication of the OCD will be made of any person in the civilian-defense program who makes a contribution "involving the highest degree of judgment, skill or ingenuity." A commendatory letter to such persons may be made at any time by any chief of service, without consideration by the Committee on Citations and Awards.

The committee, which plans to meet at the end of this week to consider the first recommendations, comprises Maj. Gen. R. C. Harris, U. S. A., retired, chairman; R. L. Jarnagin, secretary; Frederick E. Altemus, Joshua Evans, jr., William W. Everett, Col. Julius I. Peyser and Mrs. Grace Hays Riley.

House Passes Recreation Board Bill

Committee Approves Income Law Change; Commissioners Ask Corporals for Police

The House yesterday passed, by unanimous consent, and sent to the White House the District recreation bill creating a local recreation board of seven members to be appointed by the District Commissioners.

Other developments on the local legislative front on Capitol Hill yesterday included:

House District Committee approval of a bill amending the local income-tax law which will exempt about 95 per cent of out-of-town corporations from paying a 5 per cent tax on net profits they earn here.

Introduction of a bill by Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee to permit the District to compromise inheritance and State taxes in cases of conflicting claims of domicile.

A request from the Commissioners for legislation to increase the efficiency of the Metropolitan Police Department by changing probationary terms.

Board Gets Power

The recreation bill, given the final Congressional stamp of approval, vests all power for the local recreational set-up in the hands of the new board. It will be composed of a representative of the Commissioners, one from the Board of Education, and one from the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission and four private citizens.

The amended tax bill, which was approved by the District Committee, exempts out-of-town corporations from the 5 per cent tax if they receive their orders here by salesmen, phone or written communication. Only C. O. D. orders, estimated at about 5 per cent of total business, would be subject to the tax.

Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, chairman of the fiscal affairs subcommittee, which conducted hearings on the measure, said that the District will be able to continue to tax coal and gasoline dealers located outside the District boundary who make most of their sales in the city.

Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech told the committee the local government will lose approximately $185,000 annually if the bill is passed.

Cuts Down Legislation

The bill introduced by Representative Randolph to compromise inheritance and State taxes will save "lengthy and costly" litigation in many cases because of non-existance of statutory authority, Keech explained in an appended message.

The police measure requested by the Commissioners would create a probatory period of three years instead of one, with the right existing to dismiss at any time a probationer whose services are not deemed satisfactory.

It would create the new rank of corporal and divide privates into two classes—those who have passed the probationary period and those who have not.

House District Committee action on a bill requiring all physicians practicing in Washington to be American citizens was carried over at the request of Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland, that Dr. Thomas Parran, head of the United States Public Health Service, appear to testify on the measure.

Passage of the Senate-approved bill was urged by Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer; Dr. David V. McCauley, dean of the Georgetown University Medical School; Dr. Charles F. White, professor of surgery at George Washington University Medical School; Dr. Joseph S. Wall, chief of staff of Children's Hospital; Dr. Frederick C. Fishback of the District Medical Society.

Opposed by Group

Opposition was expressed by Dr. Foster Kennedy, professor of neurosurgery at Cornell Medical School; Albert Hamilton, of the Socialist Party; Sidney Katz, secretary of the District-Maryland Industrial Union Council (C. I. O.); Harry Biele, secretary of the National Committee for Resettlement of Foreign Physicians; J. Austin Stone, Refugee Committee of Friends' Meeting; the Rev. Francis W. McPeek, Washington Federation of Churches.

Meanwhile, before a House Appropriations subcommittee conducting hearings on the District's 1943 budget of $56,500,000 Rufus S. Luck of the Washington Taxpayers Association proposed cuts totaling $4,036,575 in order to prevent a tax spiral for citizens.

Declaring that all tax returns are scheduled to shrink, Lusk said the following amounts could be cut:

New public library building, $228,000; new school buildings, $1,661,375; public assistance, $850,000; purchase of park lands by the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission, $300,000; street repairs, $440,900; street alterations, $401,300; sponsor's contribution to the WPA, $155,000.

Baby Returns Unscathed From Pacific War Zone

SAFE IN CAPITAL—Mrs. Donald E. Huey, wife of Capt. Huey, U. S. M. C., is shown with their baby, Dolores, 9 months. They came here from the Pacific war zone

After an 18,000-mile odyssey, during which she indirectly saved her father from being captured by Japanese soldiers, 9-month-old Dolores K. Huey rested serenly at the home of an aunt here yesterday.

Daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Donald E. Huey, U. S. M. C., Dolores arrived in Washington in the morning from Honolulu, via San Diego.

When but 11 weeks old, she left Quantico, Va., with her mother for San Diego, thence to Honolulu to visit Captain Huey. At that time Captain Huey had been ordered with his regiment to Wake Island, but because he had never seen his baby and because he hadn't seen his wife in some time he was allowed to stay over in Honolulu. A bachelor soldier was sent to Wake in his place.

Two months later the Japs struck at Pearl Harbor and Captain Huey was sent immediately to another spot in the Pacific. Mrs. Huey and Dolores remained in Hololulu while the mother went through a seige of pneumonia.

Mrs. Huey said that on the return voyage there were over 900 babies on the boat, most of them as seasick and unconcerned about the war as Dolores.

Now staying at the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. John J. Heil, wife of a Marine Corps major now in Corregidor, 1719 Otis Street Northeast, Mrs. Huey's local residence is in Indianhead, Md., with her mother. Her father is a naval officer.

A native of Punxsutawney, Pa., Captain Huey was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1937.

D. C. Group Urges Joint Conference Of Allied Labor

Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, was asked to call a joint conference of organized labor representatives from all United Nations to boost morale and improve production efforts in a resolution by the Washington Industrial Union Council, meeting last night at 1407 L Street Northwest.

The council also urged Congress to discontinue the Dies Committee by voting it an appropriation of 10 cents. The slogan, A Dime for Dies!" was approved.

In other resolutions, the council commended "President Roosevelt and his Fair Employment Practice Committee," which recently cracked down on ten war production firms and praised the work of the FBI for its probe of "undercover Fascist organizations" in this country.

Mrs. Pulitzer Loses Jewelry

Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, jr., wife of the son of the former New York publisher and donor of the Pulitzer awards, last night reported to police the loss of two diamond clips, valued at $2200.

The clips, containing between 80 and 90 diamonds, were believed to be lost somewhere between 2447 Kalorama Road Northwest, where she was visiting friends, and the Willard Hotel, where the Pulitzers are living.

PUC Orders Crosstown Bus Addition

Citizens Association, Capital Transit Both Favor Better Service on Line

Extension of the Crosstown bus line along the route proposed by the Northeast Conference of Citizens Associations and the Capital Transit Co. was ordered yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission.

The extension will carry the bus line from Westmoreland Circle past its present terminus at Catholic University to Bladensburg Road, via Fourteenth, Franklin, Evarts and Vista Streets Northeast and South Dakota Avenue.

On strength of evidence offered during three days of public hearings, the P. U. C. abandoned its proposal to discontinue certain sections of the Rhode Island Avenue and Hyattsville-College Park bus lines.

Establishment of feeder lines to serve the extended route was deferred until representatives of the commission and the Transit Co. could agree upon the most satisfactory compromise between suggestions offered during the hearings by P. U. C., Transit Co., and Citizens Associations spokesmen.

Announcement of the commission's decision came somewhat dramatically, five minutes after Dean J. Locke, Capital Transit witness had cited a policy statement of the Office of Defense Transportation discouraging the extension of bus lines or establishment of new ones to any region not specifically of military or naval importance. This, Locke stated, reflected the position of the Capital Transit Co. in protesting the extension.

Symphony Drive Report to Be Given At Luncheon Today

The Army, Navy and Marine Corps will be represented at the second report luncheon of the National Symphony Orchestra's Sustaining Fund Campaign at the Mayflower at 12:30 p. m. today by high-ranking officials and wives.

Results of the first five days' campaigning for $114,000 to carry the orchestra through its 1942-43 concerts will be announced.

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, will make the principal address.

Honored guests will be Mrs. John J. McCloy, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War; Mrs. Robert A. Lovett, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War for Air; Mrs. George C. Marshall, wife of the Army's Chief of Staff; Brig. Gen. James A. Ulio, Adjutant General of the Army; Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, co-chairman of the Army committee for the drive; Mrs. James V. Forrestal, wife of the Undersecretary of the Navy; Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the Marine Corps; Rear Admiral Randall Jacobs, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, and Mrs. Jacobs; Rear Admiral Emory Scott Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, and Mrs. Chester Nimitz, wife of the Commander in Chief of the Pacific Fleet.

The Blighter Was Blit, As Things Turned Out

After 23 Years, Star Thanked Her Traducer; Parade of Effigies Marches Across the Desk; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

IT JUST GOES TO SHOW. The story, I mean, that is going the rounds about the actress who only a few short weeks ago scored so tremendously as Lady Macbeth, with Maurice Evans, at the National.

JUDITH ANDERSON

It was just 23 years ago that Judith Anderson arrived in Hollywood from Adelaide, Australia, armed with a letter of introduction to Cecil B. De Mille and an iron determination to crash the "movies."

De Mille told her she wasn't the type, yet Miss Anderson has just completed a performance in "Kings Row" for Warner Brothers, which, it is being bruited about, will rival her sensational success as Mrs. Danvers, in "Rebecca," two years ago. We will find out at the Earle, beginning Friday.

Miss Anderson recently recalled that earlier visit to Hollywood, when the producer carefully looked her up and down and then crackled, "Forget the movies. You're not the type." She recalled, too, how she passionately voiced her conviction that she could act, and how De Mille thrust into her hands a volume of Shakespeare, opened at one of Lady Macbeth's big scenes, with a command to read the part. And how, when she had finished, he said, "You can act. Try the stage. Take those plays along and study them."

On this unique anniversary, Miss Anderson returned De Mille his dog-eared, much-thumbed volume of Shakespeare with this little note:

"You almost broke my heart 23 years ago today, but I'm grateful for it now. And I AM in the movies, after all! I am returning your Shakespeare, somewhat the worse for wear. Save it for the next little girl who comes along with an ambition to be a glamour girl when she should try to be an actress. I know it by heart now, anyhow."

It is a bit by way of wrecking a precedent to thank the man who broke your heart, but that is the way Judith Anderson is—as this column was pretty thoroughly convinced in recent conversations about her and her profoundly impressive Lady Macbeth with Florence Reed. She first seriously damaged a precedent when she declined to accept a part until its lines had been materially REDUCED. She was by way of splitting another one wide open when, after all that early discouragement, she finally made her motion picture debut at the age of 41. But, as she remarked to Mr. De Mille, she is in the movies now, after all. Everyone with an eye for superior acting hopes it is to stay.

Critics Meet Cast in Cutouts

Speaking of "Kings Row," somebody in the Warner offices is having himself a kindergarten field day cutting out paper dolls! Only, for once, there is some point to it. One by one, day by day, the principal characters in the camera version of the Henry Bellaman best-seller are parading across the drama desks in the form of 6-inch cardboard figures that convey a strikingly realistic notion of who and what they are. So far, Ann Sheridan, Ronald Regan, Betty Field, Robert Cummings, Mme. Maria Ouspenskaya, and Charles Coburn have dropped in, with the rest probably on their way up E Street. Some youngster of scrapbook age we know is going to be made very happy.

Sidney Lust, among the foremost of Washington's and Maryland's independent motion picture exhibitors, at the request of Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's Inc., has accepted the State chairmanship for the Maryland collection drive during the week of May 14-20, for the benefit of the Army and Navy relief funds. The national campaign is being conducted by the War Activities Committee of the motion picture industry. Just to give you an idea, the Maryland theaters, under Mr. Lust's chairmanship, collected $17,000 in the President's last March of Dimes campaign, against $1500 the previous year. Don't look at me. I'd be the last one in the world to ask, "What's in a name?" That was that lad Shakespeare. Remember?

With Billy House, his painful attack of arthritis effectually whipped, back in the cast steaming full-tilt through his antic role, and Eddie Garr costarring in top form, Olsen and Johnson's fabulous "Hellzapoppin" last night entered the second and final week of its second fortnight's engagement at the National Theater, under full power. Full power for this one generates more explosive surprises than you've ever encountered before or behind a proscenium, under a circus tent, at a rodeo, or anywhere else—possibly excepting Tokyo. Not to see this theatrical phenomenon would be like going to Yellowstone and missing Old Faithful.

Hey, Mister, this lamb and lion business was supposed to be in March!

Odd Gathering of the Clans

By Frederick C. Othman,
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, April 20.—It is old home week at Warner Brothers with Charles Boyer and Edmund Goulding and Andre Charlot and other pals of 20 years ago together for the manufacture of a movie.

It is a good movie, too. At least that's what Tony Gaudio, the cynical cameraman claims. He said Miss Joan Fontaine actually made him cry and nobody's done that to Gaudio since Norma Talmadge. She used to do it all the time.

This new picture which has impressed Gaudio is called "The Constant Nymph." Before we can get on with our story, we'll have to identify our cast of characters: Goulding is the director; he used to be an actor in London. Charlot is playing a character role; he once was Europe's greatest revue impresario. Boyer is the head man in the film. Two decades ago he was attending dramatic school in Paris. One of his schoolmates was Marcel Dalio. Yep, Dalio's in the film, too. We've also got to mention Miss Jeanine Crispin, the Parisian dramatic actress, who fled her home one jump ahead of the Germans and found herself playing with her old friend, Boyer, in her first Hollywood role.

In 1910 Goulding was one of England's serious young actors. A tragedian, he wanted to be. Charlot brought him his first big revue, "Kill That Fly," to London's Alhambra Theater and hired Goulding as a comic.

A Big Nickel's Worth

Hollywood, Calif., April 20. Juke boxes may have taken the rest out of restaurant and put the din in dinner, but in this jive and jitterbug age they're getting to be Hollywood's No. 1 casting directors as far as bands are concerned. Studios, particularly Universal, keep close check on orchestra popularity in the jukes, and when a band proves it can top the lists at places where the boys and gals go to sway and swing it at a nickel a throw, it's bound for celluloid. And the boys do more than toot the horns. They're tossed into leading roles. Sometimes whole stories are written around them—like Kay Kyser at RKO.

ANN SHERIDAN

In that case, the veteran actors find themselves playing second fiddle to the real fiddle. Why, in past few weeks, Woody Herman and his boys had to carry the load in "What's Cookin'"; Ozzie Nelson in "Strictly in the Groove," is strictly that; Al Donahue and confreres made a short all by themselves; Harry James is really the big buck in "Private Buckaroo." And most of them can thank your nickels that they're in.

A group of soldiers at Fort Francis, Wyo., called Ann Sheridan on the "George Washington Slept Here" set, and told her they'd pooled all their beer money to pay the tell. Ann told them to go ahead and have their beer and send the bill to her. "You've already paid it," said the speaker—"the bartender bet us $10 we couldn't get you on the phone!"

Well, what next? In her new picture, "Now, Voyager," they're turning Bette Davis into a clothes horse. Starts off dowdy, but goes into the stretch with 30 different costumes specially designed by Orry-Kelly.

Mary Boland, who has a suit pending with Actors Equity, is planning to produce a play here.

Doris Dudley, who announced she would shake the dust of Hollywood from her heels and head back for New York at the finish of her part in "Moon and Sixpence," has suffered a change of heart. She's still around. Wonder what it is about our town?

Whole town's laughing at Tallulah Bankhead's wisecrack at the Stage Door Canteen, when she quizzed the Quiz Kids. Script called for kids to say Tallulah was their favorite actress. "How would these kids know anything about me?" she asked. "They've read everything about you, Miss Bankhead," smirked the publicity man. "Disgraceful!" barked Bankhead, "that's no proper reading for children!"

Ruth Hussey not only plans a double-ring wedding, but has put her seal of ownership on Lincoln Fogarty by exchanging engagement rings with him. She sent him a nifty one of antique gold.

Gene Tierney tells this on herself. When she was displaying her form in a gorgeous Hollywood gown, her 15-year-old sister, Pat, said, "It's very beautiful, very sexy and VERY bad taste!"

New York, April 20.

Oona O'Neill, Eugene O'Neill's daughter, who was selected New York's No. 1 deb last week, is being screen-tested by Paramount . . . Ever since her selection was publicized Miss O'Neill has received many letters and phone calls from unknown admirers. Friday a man phoned her and promised her screen and stage jobs. The youngster recognized his pretense and demanded: "What is the real purpose of your call?" . . . "You're right. I'm not in show business," he confessed, "but I've seen your photo, and I like you so much I want to give you a tip. Bet on Rough Time in the fifth race at Narragansett" . . . Miss O'Neill hung up. And she didn't bet on Rough Time. The horse won the race—and paid $30.70.

Mayris Chaney, who has become the dance partner of Alvarez, will contribute her first week's salary to Army and Navy Relief. The team—getting $1000 a week—will open out of town and debut in New York at Loew's State in three weeks . . . Quentin Reynolds, who was honeymooning in Sun Valley, was recalled by Collier's and will go to London next week. He'll make a trip with the British Commandos and do a documentary film about them . . . Melvyn Douglas, who continued his OCD duties from the set where he was completing a picture, will return to Washington. He'll remain there at least three months . . . Abbott and Costello will shoot some of their "Pardon My Sarong" scenes at Santa Anita—with the interned Japs as spectators.

When Lord Beaverbrook visited the Stork Club last, Proprietor Sherman Billingsley told him that he had heard of a British village named Billingsley. "I'll check on that for you when I go back," Beaverbrook promised . . . A few weeks later Beaverbrook kept his promise and reported: "Yes, it's true. There is a Billingelsy, England. Its population is 522. They have half as many people as visit your night club in one evening."

Arthur Gershwin, the composer, now is collaborating with Doris Fisher, daughter of the late song writer, Fred Fisher, who was responsible for "Dardanella" . . . The United States Army is organizing a football team from among the college and pro stars now in the service. The team will play National League opponents this fall for Army Relief . . . The Japanese Nippon Club in San Francisco will be opened in May as an A. W. V. S. canteen for the junior officers of the Army, Navy and Marines. The Nippon Clubhouse in Manhattan would make an ideal canteen, once the photographic dark rooms are cleaned up.

I. G. Seeger, a young theatrical attorney, enlisted in the Navy and went to the training ship Prairie State. Seeger, whose nickname is "Tex," learned that another trainee—a native of Texas—also is nicknamed "Tex" . . . It is the custom of the Navy, whenever such a conflict arises, for both claimants to toss a coin, winner to keep the nickname. Before they tossed the Texan asked Seegar, "By the way, what's your real name?" . . . "Israel Gedaliah," Seeger replied . . . "Man alive, Ah'll call yuh 'Tex,'" the Texan declared, "Yuh-all need the nickname more'n Ah do."

Pursuant to the dress manufacturers' campaign for ladies to wear evening gowns at night—because the members of the armed forces prefer them that way—Olsen and Johnson now raffle, at each performance of "Sons o' Fun," one $100 evening gown. Only uniformed men are permitted to participate in the raffle . . . Ole Olsen's mother, Kathryn, was hit by a car and is now convalescing at Nassau Hospital, in Oceanside, Long Island

A Nat Failing—Double Plays

Fenway Park, Boston, April 20.—The Washington infield has been offending the tender sensibilities of Manager Bucky Harris on the subject of double plays. As a fellow who was the middle man of the famed Peck-to-Harris-to-Judge combination which lifted the double play record to new heights in 1924-25, the Washington manager is being anguished by the double plays his club isn't making.

POVICH

"Our pitchers have been getting a dirty deal," Harris confesses. "Anytime this infield makes a double play, I'm surprised. They act like they don't know how, aside from their sloppy handling of the ball."

The Nats' shoddy infield play has been a horrible kick in the teeth to Harris, who thought that he would have few worries on that score when the club was in the South. He expected no heroics from Bobby Estalella who, after all, is a converted outfielder at third base, but he has been handed a terrific let-down by Rookie Shortstop Bob Repass.

In the South, Repass appeared to be the answer to Harris' prayer for a succesor to Cecil Travis. The tall rookie from Columbus was long and loose and covered ground. He had a good pair of hands and his throwing arm was strong and accurate. But that was in the South. Repass in the first week of the season bore no resemblance to that fellow. Throws have been tearing through his hands, he has been unsteady on ground balls, he hasn't been feeding the ball to the second baseman with any skill, and his routine throws to first haven't been good.

Repass' Work Promises Improvement

"I don't know what to make of it," Harris admitted. "I'm hoping that Repass will settle down. He showed me too much in Florida to give up on him. I hope its only a tension that he'll get over. This much can be said for him—he doesn't know from day to day what kind of a second baseman he'll be working with. That may be throwing him off stride."

Harris is yearning for the day when Frank Croucher rejoins the infield at second base. The veteran Croucher worked well with Repass in his few appearances in the South before he came down with the sore arm that has kept him on the bench. "When Croucher and Repass get to know each other, there'll be better ball handling I think," said Harris. "If there isn't we're sunk. No club ever got into the first division with the kind of infielding we've been getting."

The Mexican Joe Gomez has been doing everything well in the field except make double plays, but the Nats' hitting power isn't such that Harris can afford to carry the weak-batting Mexican. Croucher is not exactly a terror to big league pitching, either, but he figures to outhit Gomez by 50 points.

There is another problem that is disturbing Harris. It concerns Bobby Estalella, who has been a target for bean balls in virtually every game since the season started. "They're throwing at Bobby, no doubt of that," said Harris. "It's a wonder to me that he hits as well as he does, knowing he may have to hit the dirt every time the pitcher lets one go."

A 'Sleep' of the Bat Might Help

Estalella is hopping mad about it, too, but he's quite helpless to remedy the situation. "I no can do nottin, " says Bobby in his broken English. "When dey peetch to my head I gotta duck. Some day soon, though, I let my bat sleep from my hands. Den I break some peetcher's leg and I say I am so sorry. Dass what dey say to me."

Throwing dust-off balls at the Nats' Cubans is an old habit of the big league pitchers who for years have been resenting what they consider the intrusion of Latin players into the American game. They haven't even drawn a warning from the umpires, and on that subject the umpires themselves have not been too kind to Estalella.

The other day Estalella struck out three times against Philadelphia pitching, but it was excusable. He had to swing in self-defense, because the umpires were calling anything close to the plate a strike against the Cuban.

There can be no further suspicion, however, of Estalella's courage. Any time he goes to the plate, he must be prepared to duck in contrast to American players who get a fair shake in the batter's box. Notwithstanding, Estalella has been standing up there and getting his share of hits. He must be better than a fair hitter.

GEN. LEAR DEMANDS ATHLETICS FOR ARMY

New York, April 20.—Blunt, two-fisted Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear, whose yoo-hooing case did much to bring the country down to the sober realities of war, has issued a decisive declaration on the place of sports in the life of a soldier. We pass it on to you because it is a striking example of the new outlook on muscle-building games. It might help you, too.

CONSIDINE

In an order to all commanders in his Second Corps Area, Lear blasts the "indifference on the part of some officers to the real purpose behind the physical education . . . required of our troops by this headquarters. To win this war you must have troops who are physically strong enough to make the efforts and sacrifices required of them."

"There is not much time left to train our men," Lear warns his officers, "but it is still within your power to develop their physical strength to the point where they will be fit for any effort. All other conditions being equal, victorious troops are troops in prime physical condition."

Men Are Strongest Between 20 and 29, He Says

Speaking of strength and its peaks, Lear states that men are at their best for soldiering between the ages of 20 and 29. To build up the atrophied muscles of these and older Army men, the general points out that "it is possible by heavy exercise" to increase muscular strength by 55 to 90 per cent. "Muscles grow, not in proportion to the total foot-pounds of work done, but to the foot-pounds of work done in a unit of time," Lear asserts. "Much more heart development is secured by running a mile in 5 minutes than by running it in 7 or walking it in 15.

"Strength is developed more rapidly by marching with a pack than without it. Muscles are developed more rapidly by using them against resistance than without resistance . . . For example, it is better to have athletes wear heavier basketball, football or track shoes in practice than in competition. The heavy shoes develop greater strength."

The general knows that the program he is outlining will not come easily to soldiers whose civilian lives have been passive. He states that they must force themselves to their psychological limits in order to attain their physical limits; in other words, they must overcome their natural dislike for hard exercise by sheer will power.

Declaims Use of Drugs by Fighting Men

"The Germans have been reported to be using drugs to drive their men to the physiological limit," Lear reports, but adds that the use of drugs is dangerous. He recommends, instead, "the building of a proper morale and a will to fight."

Did you ever notice that after a good runner finishes a race he makes several turns around the track at slower speeds? Well, the general noticed it. "For rapid recovery after heavy, fatiguing exercise it is important that light activity be continued," he recommends. "One does not recover as fast after a hard race by lying down on his back or by sitting down as he does by staying on his feet and walking. The important thing in this case is to keep up a good blood supply to the extremities. Probably the best type of light activity after a very long marching would be to lie on the back, raise the legs in the air, and exercise them as if riding a bicycle.

"Sodliers who are physically fit," finishes the general, "as well as proficient in their military training, will meet the enemy confident in their individual superiority—and it is with such men that victories are won."

Giant Fears A Permanent Brain Injury

Decision to Quit Leaves Nova Minus Foe in Navy Relief Fight Here May 21

By the United Press

New York, April 20.—Abe Simon hung up his gloves today—with a derrick.

To prevent any chance of going "punchy" from repeated head beatings, the giant prizefighter of Richmond Hill, N. Y., retired from the ring, canceling more than $50,000 worth of purses for future bouts.

He did this at the behest of two comparative Lilliputians—his redheaded bride, Rita, and his diminutive but dynamic manager, James Jabbering Johnston.

Taking a leaf from the book of Gene Tunney, Ample Abe, who has shown dreadnaught ruggedness in two title battles with Champion Joe Louis, hung up his huge mitts rather than risk permanent brain injury, after X-rays showed that "certain head glands might be impaired easily."

Suffers Back Ailment

Simon, one of the biggest men ever to challenge for the crown with his 250 pounds on a 6-foot 4-inch chasis, is suffering also from a back ailment — a sacro-illiac condition made famous by Max Schmeling—but that's a minor matter, according to bride Rita, who is a registered nurse and laboratory expert.

Today's retirement caused immediate cancellations of bouts with Harry Bobo at Pittsburgh next Monday night, with Lou Nova at Washington, D. C., May 21; with Turkey Thompson at Los Angeles in June, and with Pat Valentino at San Francisco in July.

Hall of Fame For Grid Stars Is Planned

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 20.—A hall of fame for college gridiron greats, patterned after baseball's hall in Cooperstown, N. Y., will be established in Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, this fall.

The project was announced today by the Maxwell Memorial Club, named for the late Robert W. (Tiny) Maxwell, great Swarthmore tackle a generation ago.

Life-size busts of men who contributed greatly to the sport will be placed in the hall, Bert Bell, president of the club, said.

"Members of the club will make the first selections," said Bell. "They will pick several leaders from the list of those now deceased."

Walter Camp, father of the All-American selections, Notre Dame's Knute Rockne and E. K. Hall, of Dartmouth, former chairman of the intercollegiate rules committee, will be among those to be given first consideration, Bell added.

After this fall, the selections will be made from the ranks of the living leaders. Nominations are to be made by sports writers and radio commentators in all parts of the Nation.

The final choice is to be made by the club, however.

Newly elected members of the hall of fame are to be guests at the Thanksgiving Eve testimonial dinner when the announcements will be made annually.

The club also selects "America's No. 1 college player" each year.

Montgomery Soundly Beats Indian Peralta

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 20.—A vastly improved Bob Montgomery soundly trounced Indian Joe Peralta tonight to gain a 10-round decision before 6000 fans at the arena.

The Philadelphia Negro, who dropped a disapponiting decision to Lightweight Champion Sammy Angott a few months ago, wasted little time in showing his home-town followers that he has come a long way from that fight.

Heavier at 137½ pounds, Montgomery flayed away at Peralta's ribs throughout with devastating punches and was credited with no less than six rounds on any of the three officials' score cards. One gave Montgomery all except one heat. Peralta, now fighting out of Tamaqua, Pa., weighed 134¾.

Old Hack Wilson Helping Uncle Sam In Bomber Factory

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, April 20.—Hack Wilson, who used to smack homers for the Chicago Cubs, is batting for Uncle Sam now.

The former major-leaguer is a tool checker for the Glenn L. Martin Co., which makes bombers for the Army and Navy.

Wilson, now 42, came within four homers of equaling Babe Ruth's record of 60 in 1930. He's considering becoming manager and part-time player with a semipro team this summer.

Hernandez Gains VerdictOver Banks

Baltimore, April 20 (AP).—Firing away at long range, Pedro Hernandez, 125½, of New York, won a split decision in ten rounds tonight from Billy Banks, 134¾, Washington.

Banks, a hard puncher at close range, won a decision from Hernandez two weeks ago. The referee and one judge gave the New York featherweight the nod tonight, while the other judge voted for Banks.

In an eight-round semiwindup, Buddy Thomas, 166, Washington, won a unanimous decision from Eddie Finnazzo, 160, Baltimore.

Dodgers Rout Braves, 9-2, to Regain Lead

Kirby Higbe Goes Route for 1st Victory; Dolph Camilli Hits Homer Off Earley

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, April 20.—Brooklyn's durable Dodgers, champions of the National League, took over undisputed possession of first place today by crushing the Boston Braves, 9 to 2.

The defeat, third in three days for the Braves, knocked them out of a first place tie along with the Pittsburgh Pirates, who lost to the Chicago Cubs.

Kirby Higbe chalked up his first pitching triumph of the season, limiting the Braves to seven hits, while his mates landed on three Boston hurlers for 11 blows and scored in every odd inning in which they batted.

Camilli Hits Homer

Tom Early pitched the first three innings for the Braves and absorbed the defeat as the Dodgers turned five hits into as many runs. Dolph Camilli smashed a home run in the first frame and scored behind Augie Galan, who opened the Brooklyn attack with a single.

In the third, Dixie Walker's double scored Pete Reiser and another two-bagger by Pilly Sullivan scored Walker and Camilli, who had walked.

Rookie Warren Spahn followed Earley and got into trouble in the fifth by yielding a single to Reiser and walking Camilli and Walker to load the bases. Cliff Dapper batted for Sullivan and pumped a single into left field for two runs. Billy Herman walked to fill the bags again with one out, but Peewee Rese ended that inning by hitting into a double play.

Two Errors Help Braves

Feller's Date With G. U. Nine Collapses

Plans to bring Bob Feller and his Norfolk Naval Training baseball team here May 24 for a game headlining dedication of the new Georgetown University athletic field have collapsed, it was learned yesterday.

Rome Schwagel, Georgetown graduate manager of athletics, in explaining a hydraheaded mixup concerning dates, declared yesterday that now the only scheduled sports event of the big commencement week program at the Hilltop is a dual track meet with strong Fordham.

The confusion started when Navy wrote Georgetown some time ago that baseball, tennis and golf events scheduled between the two schools May 23, at Annapolis, might have to be moved up because of the Middies' advance graduation date.

Schwagel, seeing a chance to fill the open date and provide a big attraction for commencement week, arranged a baseball game here with Norfolk May 23. Meanwhile, Capt. T. S. King, Navy graduate manager of athletics, wrote Schwagel that Navy could play host to Georgetown on the twenty-third, as scheduled. Then Schwagel tried to reschedule the Norfolk game here for the twenty-fourth. At the time Norfolk believed a previously scheduled contest with Camp Lee on the twenty-fourth could be changed, but this failed.

Georgetown and Norfolk will, however, meet in a home and home baseball series in June or July, Schwagel said.

Burley Knocks Out First New York Foe

New York April 20 (AP).—Charley Burley, the Pittsburgh Negro walloper who has been touted as a Jack-the-Giant-Killer among middleweights, made his New York debut tonight with a first-round knockout of Phil McQuillan, of Denver. Burley weighed 154; McQuillan 147.

Poughkeepsie Officials Quit Hudson River

By the Associated Press

New York, April 20.—For the third time since its inaugural rowing in 1895, the Intercollegiate Rowing Association's regatta will not be held on the Hudson River at Poughkeepsie this year.

Asa Bushnell, secretary of the association, announced today that due to conditions brought on by the war, the board of stewards had decided against returning the crew classic to the mid-Hudson city. The last time it was away from the Hudson was in 1920 when it was rowed on Lake Cayuga. Before that it was held on Saratoga Lake in 1898.

The stewards are expected to decide soon on a new site although Bushnell said the cancellation of the race at Poughkeepsie didn't necessarily mean it would be held, even at a different location. If rowed, Onondaga Lake at Syracuse is believed to be the choice, with the distance of the varsity race reduced from 4 to 3 miles.

Reason for Decision

In a letter to Stewart Kimlin, chairman of Poughkeepsie's entertainment committee, Bushnell pointed out that the primary reasons for deciding against Poughkeepsie were change in academic schedules which made racing much earlier than in previous years, and the desire of the colleges to save the expense of opening up their boathouses and maintaining crews there for the lengthy training deemed necessary to condition them.

The earliest June dates on which tidal conditions would permit afternoon rowing on the river are during the weekend of June 13. Bushnell said these were too late since most of the colleges start summer sessions in June. It was rowed June 25 last year. Another factor was the uncertainty of obtaining observation cars, which have been dismantled and converted to wartime uses.

Hope to Return Soon

If held at another site, the training period probably would be reduced and the crews would use the housing facilities of the host college.

Since Poughkeepsie is considered the "home" of the regatta, he said the stewards were hopeful of returning there in the near future.

Although the powerful Washington crew and California, who have won eight of the last nine varsity races, and Wisconsin have not announced whether they again will challenge the Eastern boats, all three have expressed interest in the regatta. Washington won the varsity last year while California took the Jayvee and Cornell the 2-mile frehmen row.

Bosox Get Only 5 Hits, Lose, 10-4

2d Game Postponed After Nats Pound Joe Dobson, Ryba; Nats Get 2 Homers

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Boston, April 20.—Jack Wilson, who has no great love for the Red Sox, the team that gave him the brush-off last winter, came back to Fenway Park today and pitched a lot of woe to his former pals. He pitched a five-hit game, to be specific, and fetched the Nats to a 10-4 victory over the league leaders.

In a Patriot's Day game played despite weather conditions because the Red Sox front office refused to turn away the 14,700 fans who stormed the gates, Wilson and Stan Spence brutally reminded the Boston club of the deal that sent the pair to Washington last winter. They teamed up magnificently to beat their old pals.

Wilson not only held the Red Sox to five hits, but when the Nats held an 8-4 lead at the end of seven innings, he and Spence had driven in half the Washington runs.

The second half of the scheduled double-header was called off by Umpire Rommel with Washington at bat in the second inning when the weather showed no sign of relenting.

Pitcher Fails

A proud Boston record went by the boards today. For the first time this season in which six starting Red Sox ptichers had gone the full route, one of them failed. The Nats knocked Joe Dobson from the box in the sixth inning.

It was a 15-hit attack that the Nats unloaded against Dobson and his successor, Mike Ryba. They swung into a booming onslaught in the fifth inning and wiped out a 4-1 lead the Red Sox held.

Home runs by George Case and Bob Repass figured in the Nats' assault. Both of them pounded pitches over the leftfield wall. Repass' was his first big league homer and took place with Estalella on base in the ninth inning.

Wilson was slightly wonderful this afternoon. Three of the five hits he allowed were cheap infield affairs, and only one of the Red Sox's four runs was earned. A wild throw by Bobby Estalella with two out and the bases full turned loose a three-run torrent of Boston runs in the third inning to give Boston a 3-1 lead at that point.

Estalella made a game effort to atone for that misplay, however, continuing his amazing extra-base hitting streak. The little Cuban pounded out a pair of doubles and a single in three official times at bat.

The Nats made at least one hit in every inning and they led off each of the first seven innings with some kind of a safe blow against Dobson

Annapolis Shelves Stadium Plans For the Duraton

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, April 20.—Plans for a new football stadium in West Annapolis have been shelved by the United States Naval Academy for the duration of the war.

Commander L. S. Perry, acting academy athletic director, reported today the project has been dropped temporarily because of the "urgent need for materials and labor in vital defense work."

A stadium with a seating capacity for 30,000 fans was planned. The site for the football plant has already been graded but no construction contracts have been let.

Perry said the academy's decision to abandon the project until the war's end would not alter plans to play all Navy's 1942 home games in Thompson Stadium here.

Catcher Robertson Hurls G. W. to 6-5 Edge Over Virginia

Gives Seven Hits in First Mound Job

Cave, Cavaliers' Ace, Allows but 5 Blows But Six Passes Hurt; Strikes Out Nine

Running short on pitchers, George Washington University nine sent its regular catcher to the mound with high success yesterday, the Colonials downing the University of Virginia, 6-5, at Griffith Stadium.

It was Billy Robertson, nephew of Clark Griffith, who got his first collegiate pitching assignment and made good. His fire-ball tosses limited the Cavaliers to seven hits and he walked only two batters. Some wildness, however, cropped up when he hit three opponents and committed a pair of wild pitches.

Alex Cave, Virginia's right-hand ace, meanwhile, was fanning nine of the Colonials, but handing out six bases on balls along with five hits, G. W. used the latter to full advantage to win.

Three runs in both the third and fifth innings accounted for the winners' scoring, while Virginia hung up its score on single runs in the third and fourth, and a three-run spree that fell just short in the sixth.:

Oliver Heads 200 Athletes In Navy Class

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, April 20.—Another parade of famous sports figures filed into the United States Naval Academy today, second of four indoctrination classes for athletic experts commissioned Naval Reserve officers to "toughen-up" the Navy's aviation cadets.

Following closely on the heels of the original "V-5" physical instructors' class, which went on active duty Saturday, today's band was headed by G. A. (Tex) Oliver, former Oregon University football coach, who is scheduled to groom the Navy Cadet grid team at St. Mary's (Calif.) College next fall.

With Oliver, approximately 200 various sports authorities, will receive a dose of their own medicine between now and May 16, as they conform to academy discipline and submit to the hardening program the Navy has authorized for its flying cadets.

When they complete the indoctrination training, which also includes study in Navy customs and traditions, they'll be sent to regional preflight schools to await the arrival next month of the vanguard of 30,000 air cadets expected to seek naval aviation commissions during the next year.

Physical training officials here said today's arrivals included Frank C. Lane, executive director of the Cincinnati Reds' farm system; Dean L. McAdams, stellar University of Washington halfback; Joe McArdle and John Druze, assistant football coaches at Notre Dame; Frank S. Cuminsky, former Ohio State lineman; Al Barabas, Columbia's ranking back of several seasons ago; Fordham's Len Eshmont, and George Paskvan, recent Wisconsin grid star.

Rigney Beats Tigers, 3 to 1, For White Sox

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 20.—Rookie Harry Sketchley's double that drove in two first inning runs gave Johnny Rigney and the Chicago White Sox a 3 to 1 decision over Detroit's Paul Trout in a pitchers' duel here today.

Sketchley, U. C. L. A. lad who leaped directly from the campus into a big league line-up when Outfielder Taft Wright was injured, followed singles by Wally Moses and Joe Kuhel with his extra base blow.

Moses' single was one of his three that comprised half the Sox' total off Trout. He drove in Catcher Mike Tresh, who walked, with the other Chicago run in the seventh.

In scoring his season's first victory, Rigney allowed six hits and struck out seven.

Eagles Win Battle of Errors From Elizabethtown by 17-10

18 Miscues Recorded; 10-Run Onslaught In Third Settles Issue for American U.

Some sort of record for lax baseball was set at American University yesterday when the Eagles, victors in only one previous game, slashed out a 17-10 margin over Elizabethtown (N. J.) Teachers nine largely as a result of a 10-run onslaught in the third inning.

Eighteen errors, seven by the winners, marked the exhibition.

Five of Elizabethtown's misplays contributed to American's big third inning, as much as its six singles, three doubles, three stolen bases and a pair of walks. A total of 13 men were up there swinging.

Herman Byer, former high school star here, started on the mound for the Eagles but was removed during the invaders' 4-run uprising in the second inning. Charley Klingman took over, holding the Teachers to eight hits the rest of the way.

Meanwhile, American, suddenly gone bat conscious, thumped three Elizabethtown pitchers for 18 hits. Star of the day at the plate was long Rube McNab, a pitcher who also plays outfield and shortstop. He conected for three singles and a double in five official times at bat.

Tom Crane Stars As W. & M. Wins, 4-2

Williamsburg, Va., April 20 (AP).—Capt. Tommy Crane added a homer to his tight pitching here this afternoon to lead the William and Mary Indians to a 4-2 victory over the University of Richmond. It was the first game played by the two schools this spring.

Central Faces Eastern Nine In Series Today

One of the last two interhigh teams to see action in the 1942 baseball series, Central undergoes a serious threat to its championship aspirations today when it meets Eastern on the Vikings lot at 4 p. m. A second public school clash sends Coolidge over to Western for a meeting at the same time.

Central's outing today will be against the team which downed Anacostia in its only interhigh start, thus earning strong consideration for the championship playoff which will send the two top teams in the standings into a 3-game series. The Vikings have had only one formal game to date.

Against Eastern's Garland Curles the hosts will send either Aaron Weisenburg or Harry Wolfe to the mound. Both have had considerable experience, the first concentrating on a curve and the second on a fast ball.

Western, fresh from a beating of Wilson, can be expected to make short work of the light-hitting Colts if the latters' pitchers fall short. The Raiders will use Clarence Kuldell, stellar American Legion hurler, and Coolidge will probably try again with Bernie Shankman after an opening loss to Roosevelt.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE
Eastern at Central, 4 p. m.
Coolidge at Western, 4 p. m.
Wilson at Georgetown Prep, 3:30.
Gonzaga at Anacostia, 3:30.
Bethesda at Tech, 3:30.

N.T.S. Baseball Forces Rout Hallmen, 10-1

With a 15-hit assault against two Charlotte Hall pitchers, National Training School nine yesterday marked up its first triumph of the year, 10-1, on the Bladensburg Road diamond.

Pitcher Yates, of the Trainers, held the opposition to four scattered hits in the one-sided affair. His main aide on the offensive was Shortstop Harvey, who pounded out four singles in five trips, and Outfielder O'Bryan, who slammed a triple and single in four times at bat.

tallied twice more in the last half when they shelled Spahn off the mound.

Successive singles by Reiser, Joe Medwick and Walker produced one run and brought Lou Tost in to relieve Spahn. Tost retired the side without another hit, although Medwick scored on an outfield fly.

Tost scored the last Boston marker in the eighth when he led off with a double and came home on a single by Tommy Holmes.

Anacostia High Loses Lund, Popular Coach, to Air Corps

Joey Kaufman Takes Post of Grid, Baseball Mentor

Rolland Lund, the popular coach who put Anacostia High School on the schoolboy sports map in only five years of competition, yesterday announced his resignation from the school's staff to accept a first lieutenant's commission in the Army Air Corps.

Lund will leave for Spokane, Wash., today to report for duty in the Air Corps physical education department. His football and baseball coaching post at Anacostia, it was revealed, will be taken over by Joey Kaufman, former G. W. backfield star, on a temporary basis.

A native of Woodbridge, N. J., Lund was on the scene when Anacostia opened its doors in 1935. His first football team in 1937 won four of its six games, and last year he capped his short career at the "flats" school by taking second place in the annual public high grid race.

His baseball teams have also shone, despite the shortness of material he faced. He has developed numerous stand-out athletes on the Indians' baseball and football squads, chief of which were the three-letter aces, Roy "Flash" Gordon and Art Fairbroth.

In announcing his acceptance for a commission, Lund said, "I'm glad to get into the war effort, and expect to stay until six months after the war is over. Of course I'll miss my job at Anacostia, but the fact my family will be with me will help some."

Five-Team Track Meet Is Scheduled This Afternoon

Catholic University trackmen will be host in a five-team meet today at Brookland Stadium in what amounts to a preview of the Mason-Dixon Conference championship next month.

The hosts, American U., Bridgewater, Gallaudet and Loyola, of Baltimore, will all have representatives in the track and field events starting at 3:30 p. m.

C. U.'s victory over Washington College Saturday stamped Dorsey Grimth's team as one of the strongest in the conference.

Outfielder Returned

Knoxville, Tenn., April 20 (AP).—The Knoxville baseball club announced tonight the return to Lexington, N. C., club of the North Carolina State League of Outfielder Roy Pinkston, who had been with the local club on option.

E. Potomac Golf Range Sets Prizes For Inaugural

A $25 War Savings bond and $20 in stamps will be up for the longest drives and best approach shots tomorrow night at the official opening of the East Potomac driving range. The longest drive in the hour-and-a-half contest, between 8 and 9:30 o'clock will net the winner $10 in stamps. An approaching contest will be held to the green some 150-yards out, the best shot getting the $25 bond while second best will merit $10 in stamps.

Charley Malone, the former Redskin, and Bill Young, the regular tackle, will be out to earn the long driving honors, while Claude Rippy among the amateurs and several pros will be on hand.

The public is invited and there will be no charge for the shots.

Wait a Bit Out Of Wood, Derby

New York, April 20 (AP).—Matt Brady, trainer for William Ziegler, jr's racing stable, said today his colt, Wait a Bit, would not start in either the Wood Memorial at Jamaica or the Kentucky Derby May 2.

The chestnut son of Espino, who ran a good third to Apache in his first 1942 outing and then finished sixth after a rough trip in a mile and-a-sixteenth affair Saturday, had been regarded as a likely starter in the Wood and a possibility in the Derby, depending on how he did in the Jamaica feature.

"But Wait a Bit came out of Saturday's race somewhat the worse for his bumping," Brady explained. "So we won't point him for either stake."

Heavies In Feature At Riverside

Champion Cochrane Will Second Foe of D. C. Fighter; Four Other Bouts Listed

By Tony Neri

A well-conditioned Jimmy McChard, former D. C. amateur champion, will rule a slight favorite tonight over Joe O'Gatty, tough Newark steelworker, when the pair square off in the eight-round main event of Promoter Joe Turner's boxing show at Riverside Stadium.

On the shelf since his winning effort against Jay D. Turner, the local heavyweight is in excellent shape. Under the watchful eye of Manager Frankie Mann, DeChard has been working daily at the Apollo gym. Tony Jim Jam, a rugged Philadelphian, has been training with Jimmy and the drills have been both fast and impressive.

DeChard resumed boxing a little over three weeks ago. He had been laid up for four months, because of injuries suffered in training for the Turner bout last fall. Manager Mann says his heavyweight has come around all right and that his condition is the best since his second pro engagement a year ago.

DeChard May Scale 195

The local boy will probably scale 195 pounds, the heaviest he's ever weighed for a fight. The added heft should help the six foot one inch youngster. In his drills with Jim Jam, DeChard had a chance to gain added ring knowledge as Jim Jam provided thorough workouts.

The veteran O'Gatty, a stablemate of Welterweight Champion Fred Cochrane, figures to give DeChard a tough fight. He is an aggressive worker who bobs and weaves and may provide a difficult target for the sharpshooting Jimmy.

O'Gatty has fought many top heavyweights and, although not considered too tough an opponent, he's a kind of fighter that can't be regarded too lightly.

Cochrane, who Promotoer Mike Jacobs tried to match with Ray Robinson in a title fight here for Navy Relief, is due in this morning from his Pawtucket, R. I., naval base, to second O'Gatty. The welter weight titleholder may be matched later this summer with the winner of the Carl Guggino-Billy Murray scrap which heads the supporting card tonight.

DeChard and Murray Liked

The writer likes the chances of DeChard, and of Murray in the eight-round semiwindup. Murray, a 19-year-old Bellaire (Ohio) lightweight, was little less than sensational in his only other appearance in a Washington ring.

He survived two first-round knockdowns at the hands of Oscar Wright to outbox his opponent and gain a unanimous decision. The Ohio boy has had 52 fights, winning all but 2. Despite his immature years, Murray handles himself like a veteran trouper.

Promoter Turner has a pair of six-rounders and a four for the rest of his card, the first ever promoted by him at Riverside Stadium. Gus Mirman, local light-heavyweight, will meet Oscar Poindexter, and Dave Bruce will engage an opponent to be announced at ring time, in sixes. The show will open with a four-rounder between Kid Cordell, of Baltimore, and Carl Gant, of Greensboro, N. C.

Bill Duffy, of the Navy Air Station at Anacostia, was originally signed to meet Bruce, but has been transferred. Poindexter and Bruce are stablemates of O'Gatty.

The Mirman fight should be interesting. It will be his third pro venture and for the first time his opponent is reputed to be a fair fighter.

The first bout is scheduled for 8:30 p. m. Riverside Stadium is located at Twenty-sixth and D Streets Northwest.

Service-Man-to-Be Snead Wants to Quit as Champion

"Make that bald spot look as good as you can," Sammy Snead said last night as the pro golfer took time to comb his hair in his Ambassador Hotel room after fulfilling a busy day's business matters in town

Hot Springs Pro Would Like P. G. A. Title As Final Fling; Is Here on Business

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

"Kinda tired of finishing second," Sammy Snead wants a crack at the National P. G. A. Championship next month before he hangs up his sports togs in favor of a suit supplied by Uncle Sam, either the Army khaki or the Navy blue.

The country's favorite pro golfer, the slugger from Hot Springs, Va., is in town on a threefold visit and will stay until tonight when he leaves for the Midwest and four exhibition matches in Kansas and Missouri the latter part of the week.

Snead's home-town draft board is placing the married men in Class 1A and Sam is scheduled for induction on May 11. He has hopes of finding a place in the naval physical fitness program before that time, however, and will return here next week to determine his status.

Enters Service Next Month

Regardless of his Army or Navy affiliation, Snead is going into the services next month, but he hopes to obtain leave to play in what will probably be the last P. G. A. championship for years, Atlantic City, May 25-30.

"I'd like to win that one before I go in," Sam was saying yesterday as he lolled around his hotel room. Sam had been attending meetings during the day with Gene Sarazen, his partner in an exhibition match at Annapolis on Sunday; ". B. Icely, president of the Wilson Sports Goods Co., and others interested in the manufacture of golf equipment.

Snead wants that elusive major tournament victory before he quits the sports headlines for the services. Given a little time to practice, and if his lame back behaves, Sam feels all he needs is a break or two and he'll grab the biggest golf prize of the year, now that the National Open is canceled.

Always a Bridesmaid

"I've been a runner-up too long now," he recalled. "First it was the National Open, when I broke the all-time record for an hour, at least, and then Guldahl beat me. He did it again when I broke the Masters record and he came in with a 33 to beat me by a shot. Paul Runyan beat me in the P. G. A. finals in my first tournament, and two years ago Nelson beat me 1 up at Hershey in the finals. I've been the second leading money winner for the last two years and I'm at it again, with Ben Hogan on top. That second money is better than all but one, but I'd like to get on top for a change."

Snead looked back on the winter tour, which he finished as the runner-up in the cash list with more than $6000 in prizes and recalled a dozen incidents which separated him from first money. That eight at Los Angeles when he stood at the foot of the hill below the last green and hit four straight chip shots which rolled back on the green, at $800 a shot. Again when he was putting in Texas and needed a 6-footer on the seventieth hole, for a chance to win. As he addressed the ball a slightly tipsy galleryite said, "Bet you a quarter he misses." Sam stepped back, addressed the ball again and the fellow's companion loudly stated, "Raise you a dime." Sam stepped back a second time, addressed the ball a third, and missed.

Wayward Back Costly

Snead's misbehaving back has cost him several times. "I left the tour at Greensboro and went to Houston, Tex., to have it looked at and came back to the Masters but I started with a 78 and that was too much to overcome." He can usually lay off for a week and come back, as the last three years he has left the tour at New Orleans to go home and send his income tax, and has joined it several days later with a full rest and won the St. Pete open three times running.

"Looks like living out of suitcases and playing in golf tournaments is all over for us fellows for a while," Sam was saying, "but I'd like to win that P. G. A., just one time."

School Golf Teams in Four Matches Today

Wilson High and Georgetown Prep golf teams will have an opportunity to gain on the idle leaders in the respective Public High and Metropolitan sections of the schoolboy golf leagues in a quartet of matches today.

Wilson, trailing Roosevelt with a perfect record for two matches compared to four in a row for the Riders, mets Central at Manor and a victory would put them within half a game of the leaders.

Georgetown Prep entertains Blair at Garrett Park, while Bethesda's leaders are not scheduled. The Little Hoyas, defending champions among the private and suburban schools, opened their schedule Sunday.

Bethesda and Roosevelt, the present leaders, will meet today in an informal match at Indian Spring at 3 o'clock.

Wes Ferrell Happy as Manager, But Yearns to Return to Majors

Lynchburg Pilot, 33, Believes He's Still Young Enough

By the Associated Press

Lynchburg, Va., April 20.—Wes Ferrell, former major league hurler and new manager of Lynchburg's Virginia League Senators, believes he could still win games in the big time if given a chance.

The handsome North Carolinian said that before signing to come to Lynchburg he had contacted several major league managers as to the possibility of his returning to action but had no luck.

"I'm still a young man, only 33 years old, and that's not too old for a big league pitcher. I could be a help to one of the major league teams," he said.

Braves Released Him

The former Cleveland and Boston Red Sox star, who twice won more than 25 games in a season, contended that when the Boston Braves released him in 1940 he had registered two wins without a loss. He said he didn't quite understand why he had been turned loose.

Ferrell and his attractive wife were having dinner at one of the local hotels when asked how he liked baseball manging. He managed Leakesville in the Bi-State League last season and his team won the pennant on the last day of the season, beating out Rocky Mount, managed by his brother, George.

"Managing—well I like it fine although it is sorta bad when you have to turn a kid loose when he has traveled, by thumbs, 400 or 500 miles just for a tryout. It's just one of those things though" he said.

"My greatest thrill in baseball? Well, that's a hard one. But one of them was back in 1930 when I had won 11 straight and was gunning for the record of sixteenth straight.

Takoma Team Wins League Pin Pennant

Takoma Engineers won the flag in the Georgia Avenue Bowling League at Silver Spring by a one-game margin over Valdenar Landscapers, after winning its last six games. Last night the individual highs were shared by Howard Elms, Coffman Realty, and Tolly Valdenar, both of whom had 147 for high game, while a 380 set by Al Hovey-King. E. C. Keys, was tops. The Hiller Motors boys had 617—1750 for the team highs.

ODD FELLOWS

Bert Cowell, 93-average man on the Brightwood quintet in the Odd Fellows loop at Brookland, was one of the high men with his 141-345, sharing top honors with Jack Hodges, Golden Rule, whose 139-369 led his boys to high set count of 1700 but his team dropped a pair to Columbia No. 2. Columbia No. 1 totaled 607 for high team game. Amity No. 1 scored a sweep over Metropolis to go out in front by a three-game margin over last year's champs, Golden Rule, with only two more sets to go before the season closes.

COLLEGE PARK

The weekly handicap tournament at College Park returned Private Douglas McLaren, Fort Belvoir, the winner with his 426 gross that was good for top money of $30. Ralph Hutton was the runner-up and got $10 for 419, while others in the money were Charles Lilley, 409, $7; Chet Johnson, 406, $6; Elmo Wells, 404, $5, and a 147 high game won $3 for Lee Freshman. The event drew 63 entrants.

Al Treder Quits as Manor Pro To Enter Photographic Business

Popular Pro Given Leave by Directors; Served for 18 Years

Al Treder, Manor Country Club golf professional for the past 18 years, has received a leave of absence from the board of governors for the duration, he announced yesterday, and will be connected with the club in only a minor capacity.

Treder has been dividing his time between the club and a commercial photography firm operated by his father-in-law, J. H. Stieg, during the winter months. He originally intended to devote full time to his club duties starting May 1. Due to recent developments in the golfing world he recently decided the other proposition would be more profitable for the time being.

Position Always His

The Manor Club board accepted Treder's request for a leave with regrets and announced the position would be his at any time he cares to return.

Treder became an assistant professional at Manor as a teen-age youngster 18 years ago and within six months was made head professional, a position he has held since. He is a P. G. A. member, enjoyed some success in tournament play and always maintained a reputation as one of the top-flight pros in this section, particularly for his teaching.

The Manor professional will continue at the club until a temporary successor is named. Al Jamison, the East Potomac pro, was interested in the Manor assistant's job vacated by Eddie Stevens, now a private, first class in the Army and will probably put in a bid for the position. Treder said he would be available to help out on busy days and expects to retain a contact with his former position.

AL TREDER

Manor Club is the farthest from town among Washington's surrounding golf clubs and is bound to be the first one hit by the tire and gasoline shortage. The membership has remained intact to date but all the golf pros know their most lucrative years are over for a while, at least.

Sunset Boy Takes Havre de Grace Sprint, Pays $23.20

Seamanlike Beaten in The Stretch

Jockey J. Harrell Set Down After 3d Race for 'Carrying Clingendaal Wide'

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., April 20—Sunset Boy, owned by S. W. LaBrot of Annapolis, turned in a brilliant race here this afternoon, much to the disgust of favorite players in a crowd of 8000 watching the Monday sport at this plant. The son of Wise Counsellor, who won his maiden race over this track, showed little or no respect for Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords' Seamanlike, the odds-on public choice, and disposed of him in the stretch to win by a length and a half. Seamanlike held on to take second position ahead of John L. Sullivan's Cold Crack in the field of eight sprinting 6 furlongs.

With the bulk of the betting money poured in on Seamanlike, who was third to Colchis and Alsab in the Chesapeake Trial a week ago, Sunset Boy produced a $23.20 mutuel for his scattered backers. Just to show it was not a fluke, the winner turned in good time, for this track, of 1:12 3-5. The racing strip was fast and Apprentice Jockey F. Remerscheid was in the 3-year-old's saddle. Sunset Boy was made a gelding three months ago.

The day brought a suspension to Jockey J. Harrell who rode Pittsburgh, an obscure plater in the third race. The stewards set him down for the remainder of the meeting and referred his case to the Maryland Racing Commission for "deliberately carrying Clingendaal wide entering the stretch." Clingendaal, owned by H. G. Bedwell, came on to win in easy fashion as a $4.80 favorite.

In the feature, the Jarrettsville Purse, Sir Counsellor was first to show in front but Seamanlike moved up on the outside of the leader. In the meanwhile, Sunset Boy was being steadied close up. Remerscheid sent the ultimate winner to the outside approaching the stretch and Sir Counsellor stopped. In the final drive, Sunset Boy had too many guns for Seamanlike.

Dear Al:

Ben Whitaker's Requested didn't leave for the Kentucky Derby yesterday, after all. Instead he was shipped to New York, where he will race Saturday in the Wood Memorial. Can this mean that his handlers are weakening on him as a Derby candidate? Perhaps I don't know anything about handling horses, but if Requested was ridden to order in the Chesapeake Stakes then I don't believe the best use was made of the colt. In winning the Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah, Requested was last out of the gate, picked up his field gradually and went on to win going away in just about the best move made by a 3-year-old this year. Last Saturday, Requested was sent to the first turn almost under a drive. This used up some of his energy and, after moving to second position, Requested weakened in the stretch run. He's not my horse, and it's not my Derby and I don't believe I'll even pick Requested, but I would be plenty afraid of him if I knew he was going to be allowed to settle into stride and not asked for real speed until the far turn. In Saturday's Wood Memorial, Requested will tackle Colchis, winner of the Chesapeake. In this race we will see just how good Colchis is without Jockey George Woolf. The ace money rider will have to stay at Havre de Grace because W. L. Brann's Challedon goes in the $10,000 added Philadelphia Handicap. Colchis will be ridden by Jockey Maurice Peters. The Clark star will be shipped up today. Walter Haight, not eligible for the Derby, is slated to go postward in today's second race. He won't be the odds-on favorite but he has a fair chance and if you want to try to make mountains out of moleholes, momentarily speaking, dump a couple of slugs across the board. Getting back to Jockey Woolf, known hereabouts as the "Ice man." He is negotiating with Trainer Frankie Catrone, of the Valdina Farms, and may ride Valdina Orphan or Hollyrood for him in the Derby. Jockey Al Shelhamer will ride Mioland on Saturday in the Philadelphia Handicap, taking the place of Buddy Haas, who has been suspended for the remainder of the meeting. Now for the winners. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—FOUR LEAF turned in a good effort last out and appears ready to turn back this company. DOL'S KEY has speed and belongs in the money fight. LADY CASE to take care of the others.

Second race—EARLY SPRING seems best of those gathered for this sprint. Gets in light and needs only the right ride. CASTINE is a fair sort and will be a factor. WALTER HAIGHT has worked well and could surprise.

Third race—SALLYMAR was shut off on the rail last out and closed gamely. With clear sailing this one will be hard to beat. HALF CROWN was in the money behind a "good thing" recently. MARIE GALANTE is dangerous.

Fourth race—FREE DOUBLE was a winner here and CHOP STICKS took the main money in a race at Bowie. I prefer them in the order listed. STEELBEAM gets in with feather weight and is a threat.

Fifth race—CHALLOMINE is tossed in this with 98 pounds and looks like the best bet of the day. CIS MARION should go well. BLUSTERING won a sprint last out but doesn't look like a filly who will go a mile and 70 yards.

Sixth race—BASILEUS closed gamely in a sprint and looks as if he's ready for a distance of ground. I'm going to string along. STURDY DUKE will be a keen factor. GINOCA to take care of the others.

Seventh race—CALATAN appears best of those gathered for this distance affair. Should be the winner in this company. DEVILTRY and FREE TRADER finished heads apart last out and belong in the money circle.

Eighth race—WHEAT was in plenty of trouble in that re cent test over this oval. Needs only a share of the racing luck. FLASHALONG was off poorly in that last. ANONYMOUS for the minor award.

Best bet—CHALLOMINE.

Smith Checks Browns, Tribe Scores, 4 to 3

By International News Service

Cleveland, April 20.—Portly Al Smith made his first start of 1942 with the Cleveland Indians today and held the St. Louis Browns to six hits as the Indians won, 4 to 3, before 3000 fans. After a shaky start, the veteran Smith held the Browns scoreless in the last five innings.

A ten-hit attack on Denny Galehouse, who went the route for the Browns, was led by the Indians' rookie sensation, Oris Hockett, who banged out a triple, a double and a single, and scored twice. Ken Keltner got his second home run of the season in the second inning.

Jeff Heath drove Hockett across with what proved to be the winning run in the fifth. On the Browns' side, George McQuinn got a triple and double his first two times up.

By the Associated Press

Pawtucket, R. I., April 20.—Mrs. C. C. 'Winters' Off Guard took the lead right at the start today and fought off all challenges over the mile and 70-yard distance to capture the Block Island Purse, feature event at Narragansett Park.

Second choice in the betting, the winner paid $7.30, $4.30 and $3.30. Mrs. W. W. Adams' Prima Donna came in second, a length behind the winner and held a head advantage over the favored Jessie Glazs, of Glen Felkner's stable.

Prima Donna returned $10 and $5.70 in the mutuels while the show price on Jessie Gladys was $3.40.

Off Guard covered the distance in 1:43 1-5 in his first outing at the Pawtucket track. It was also his first victory in five starts this year.

Prices Frozen On Oil Paints And Varnishes

By the Associated Press

The Government yesterday took steps to head off a threatened sharp increase in the price of oil, paints and varnishes by freezing manufacturers' prices at the levels of April 13.

The temporary 60-day price order, effective Wednesday, may become a permanent price ceiling upon completion of a current OPA study of increased costs of labor, linseed oil and other materials.

The regulation covers producers' prices on all paints and varnishes containing linseed oil or any other drying oil. It includes house paint, wall paint, interior flat paint, enamels, lacquer enamel, undercoats, floor and deck paint, barn and roof paint, shingle stain, oil stain, fillers, varnish and colors in oil.

Airline Contracts Drawn

Other developments yesterday on the civilian war front included:

Contracts for use of the operational organizations of commercial airlines by the Army flying forces are being negotiated by the air service command, the War department announced. The department announced recently that approximately 25 per cent of the Nation's commercial air liners would be taken over by the air forces to carry military personnel and cargoes, and the contracts now being drafted will provide the organizations to operate and service these planes. The services will be provided at cost as determined by the Civil Aeronatics Board.

Nelson's Power Expanded

President Roosevelt yesterday passed on to Donald M. Nelson, War Producton Board chairman, the Presidential power to requisition machinery in use in industrial plants when needed by the Government for the war effort.

The second War Powers Act gave Mr. Roosevelt that power and an executive order yesterday delegated it to Nelson. The President previously had delegated to the WPB chief the requisitioning powers granted him in the act of October 16, 1941, but that act specifically excluded the requisitioning of machinery currently in use.

The WPB chairman is empowered to requisition and dispose of property needed for the prosecution of the war on a "seize first and pay later" basis.

Benzene In Oil Banned

The Government yesterday halted the use of benzene as an anti-knock ingredient in motor fuel because it is needed for synthetic rubber. The War Production Board order was effective immediately, but allowed any producer or distributor may use in the next 30 days one-sixth of the amount he used in the three months ended March 31.

Use of benzene in aviation fuel with an octane rating higher than 67 was exempted. Benzene is a principal source of styrene, one of the important ingredients of buna synthetic rubber.

Deposits on Oil Drums

The Office of Petroleum Coordinator announced that deposits would be required to insure return of drums and other metal containers used in marketing petroleum products.

Minimum deposits fixed were: $4 for the 55-gallon, 18-gauge light steel drum and the 400-pound grease drum; $3 for the 30-gallon light steel drum; $2 for the 14-gallon steel drum and the 100-pound steel grease drum and $10 for the 55-gallon heavy steel drum.

Regulations provide for deposits to be refunded on all containers returned in good condition. Such containers should be returned within 30 days.

U. S. Newsprint Supplies Held Ample for 1942

Montreal, April 20 (Canadian Press).—Charles Vining, president of the Newsprint Association of Canada, said today that there was a sufficient supply of newsprint for North American consumers to tide them through 1942.

Vining said he made the statement to counteract a misconception that had arisen from reports of probable hydropower diversion from newsprint mills to other uses.

(Earlier this month Washington sources said Canada had asked the War Production Board to determine whether the Canadian newsprint output should be maintained or whether the United States should ask that power be diverted to boost production of aluminum and magnesium plants. These reports said increased light metal production could be obtained only at the expense of newsprint.)

"There have recently been queries as to newsprint supply and it is apparent that a misconception has resulted from reports of probable hydropower diversion from newsprint mills to other uses," Vining said. "We have made careful estimates of newsprint supply and consumption for the balance of 1942.

"Our conclusion is that, after allowing for curtailment of power now in prospect, there will be mill capacity to meet the regular requirements of the Canadian industry's contract customers in the United States and Canada throughout 1942. Our estimates take into account the inventories now held by consumers and the shrinkage of deliveries to overseas markets. It is clear that if power diversion eventually does develop to a point of creating a possible newsprint shortage, such a contingency will not arise within the next six or eight months and will not occur suddenly."

Circuit Court Hears Debate On Fidelity Assurance Case

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., April 20.—Counsel for Edgar B. Sims, auditor and ex-officio insurance commissioner of West Virginia, asked the United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals today to remand the Fidelity Assurance Association reorganization case to the Federal District Court for Southern West Virginia on the ground of "newly discovered evidence."

The motion for rehearing in the district court was submitted as a battery of attorneys launched into four hours of arguments on the question of whether the reorganization of the 25-million-dollar corporation should proceed under the jurisdiction of the Federal District Court or State courts in the various States in which it has done business.

The circuit court informed counsel that the motion would be held under advisement pending completion of argument.

Clarence W. Meadows, West Virginia attorney general, who filed the motion on behalf of parties appealing from the decision of Judge Ben Moore, of the West Virginia Federal District Court, accepting jurisdiction and authorizing reorganizatoin of the corporation under the Federal Bankruptcy Act, claimed that information obtained in the past ten days showed that the corporation entered into binding contracts of insurance and therefore it acted as an insurance company.

Judge Moore held the corporation was not an insurance company, and this question of whether it was or not engaged in the insurance business is the principal point involved in the appeal to the circuit court. Representatives of six States and various creditors contend the corporation's affairs should be handled through the courts of the various States. The corporation's counsel contends it never did any insurance business, and is resisting the appeal and the motion to remand the case to the district court.

The company, formerly the Fidelity Investment Association, sold investment contracts in 29 States and has excess of 80,000 creditors.

The principal question in the appeal is whether the company should be reorganized or liquidated in State or Federal courts.

Judge Moore ruled that his court had jurisdiction and continued in effect orders that froze deposits in the various States for the protection of its contract holders.

FHA Head Asks 500 Million Rise In Finance Limit

By the Associated Press

John Blandford, jr., Housing Administrtor, asked Congress yesterday for a $500,000,000 increase in the present $300,000,000 authority for the Government to insure mortgages for private construction of defense homes.

Blandford told the House Banking Committee that the Federal Housing Authority's available insurance fund was exhausted and that an increase was necessary to conduct a program which he estimated at 285,000 family dwelling units in defense areas.

An estimated 1,300,000 "migrant" workers will go to those defense areas in the next year, he said, adding that private contractors should erect 200,000 new units, with Federal insurance, and another 85,000 should be financed "with public funds."

Nation's Transit Lines Face Acute Problem As Billions of New Riders Tax Capacity

The war has dumped a prodigious human travel problem in the lap of the American transit industry. At the same it has turned the clock back. Listen:

"Whereas ten years ago streetcars were run almost exclusively for the accommodation of the poor and middle classes, now the wealthier classes are our patrons.

"Cars can be seen going to and from places of entertainment filled with ladies robed in silks, velvets and ermine adorned with costly jewels."

That statement was made not today—although it could have been, due to tire rationing—but by a delighted speaker 60 years ago at the organization meeting of the American Transit Association.

Now, 60 years later, with billions of extra rides forced upon the industry because of new jobs opening up and diminishig use of the automobile, Charles Gordon, managing director of the ATA, says:

"The whole trend of our problem has gone into reverse. Instead of (discussing), ways and means of developing new traffic, we (have) to consider how to handle the loads which are already taxing the capacity of our facilities in many communities.

"Current figures indicate that previous estimates of 1942 passenger rides will be far exceeded and that the industry will be hard pressed for materials and equipment needed to provide the service demanded."

The industry has traveled a long way from that meeting in 1882, when no mention was made of successful experiments the year before in harnessing electricity to streetcars and the main problems were "The best way of feeding horses and how to keep conductors honest."

There were profound chances in America's way of living in those 60 years, too.

Until the First World War the transit system had a virtual monopoly on travel in cities and towns. After that war came the automobile. Millions of Americans began moving to the outskirts of towns and cities, away from streetcar lines, and depended for travel on their automobiles.

A quick look at the transit industry, in 1882 and now, will show how the travel problem has multiplied:

Sixty years ago the then $150,000,000 industry had 18,000 vehicles, 35,000 employes, 100,000 horses and mules, handled more than one billion rides yearly and had an annual fuel problem in obtaining 11 million bushels of grain and 150,000 tons of hay needed by the animals that supplied the power.

Last year the now five billion dollar industry handled more than 14 billion passenger rides—16 billion rides in 1928 was the peak—with 225,000 employes and 83,000 streetcars, subway and elevated cars, regular and charter motor buses.

All that growth and those new billions of passenger rides were in additional to the approximately 500 billion passenger miles which the Automobile Manufacturers Association estimated were accounted for by private automobiles.

Now, in the intense activity brought on by war, as jobs multiply and the use of automobiles decreases, passenger rides on the transit lines increase by the billions, a staggering new addition to the customary loads.

The industry had expected for all of 1942 a 20 per cent increase—or a total of 17 billion passenger rides—over 1941, but that rate of increase already had been reached by the end of March.

Smaller-Size Furniture to Mark Exhibit

By the Associated Press

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 20.—Defense housing furniture will feature the spring market of the Grand Rapids Furniture Exposition opening tomorrow. Charles F. Campbell, secretary of the manufacturers Association, said that of 180 firms joining the show, about 60 have contributed pieces to the defense exhibit.

"The Government has expressed a preference that all defense homes be furnished through regular retail channels," Campbell said. "That constitutes a challenge we expect the retailers to seize upon with enthusiasm."

Principal feature of new wartime furniture is its smaller size. Almost all exhibits, standard and defense, reveal new construction and materials used to circumvent shortages of critical war materials.

Metal is used sparingly and cotton is replacing kapok and down formerly used in many pieces by upholsterers. Domestic woods are replacing imported types.

Wire springs are becoming hard to obtain, Campbell said, but he declared the industry "has been carrying on some research to replace springs, and we are confident the obstacle will be overcome by the time it presents itself."

U. S. Takes Over Schering Corp.

By the Associated Press

Leo T. Crowley, alien property custodian, yesterday took over all the stock of the Schering Corporation, Bloomfield, N. J., formerly a German-influenced drug concern which manufacturers many chemicals considered vital to the war effort.

Crowley described the corporation as one of the country's outstanding pharmaceutical houses which manufactures drugs and biologicals that are of vital importance to the public health and to the medical branches of the armed forces."

One of these chemicals is anti-shock serum.

Crowley said the company had been eliminating alien influences for some months, but that his action was designed to complete Americanization of the company.

337,713 Telephones Set New Top Here

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. yesterday reported that telephones in service here at the end of March reached an all-time high of 337,713. This was an increase of 4111 over February and compared with 285,249 units in service at the end of March, 1941.

Daily calls in March averaged 1,606,330, also a new record and compared with a daily average of 1,358,782 in the same month last year.

Steel Output Rate To Rise This Week

New York, April 20 (AP).—The American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today that the steel industry would turn out 1,657,900 tons of steel this week operating at 97.6 per cent of capacity.

In the previous week tonnage was 1,651,100 tons, with operations at 97.2 per cent of capacity. A month ago, at 99 per cent, the industry produced 1,681,600 tons, and a year ago, at 98 per cent, output was 1,549,300 tons.

Foundry Trade Plans 25% Boost in Output

Cleveland, April 20 (AP).—A 25 per cent increase over last years' output is the goal of the Nation's foundry industry, said Herbert S. Simpson, president of the American Foundrymen's Association, as the organization's forty-sixth annual convention opened today.

Nearly 90 per cent of the 4800 foundries in the country are producing castings for war purposes, Simpson estimated. About half of the output is for weapons, ammunition and other supplies, and the remainder is used in the building of machinery and equipment for war industries.

New York Cotton

New York, April 20 (AP).—The cotton market encountered hedge selling barriers in attempting to rise early in today's session and finally settled back for net losses of 20 to 25 cents a bale at the finish.

Trade and mill price fixing accounted for the early firmness, but when this demand tapered local traders took to the selling side and were materially aided by hedge offerings against recent purchases of Commodity Credit Corporation fiber and a step-up in May liquidation.

Robin Hunt Will Ride a Strange Horse And Still Do All Right in Races

A STRIDE TO VICTORY—Robin Hunt winning with Lois M., a total stranger to the rider, in the Potomac Hunter Trials. Miss Hunt hah never jumped the horse until the meet

20-Year-Old Expert Makes Right Nice Record in '42 Point-to-Point

By Anne Hagner

Experts agree that you should know your horse thoroughly in order to give him a top-notch ride. Yet a 114-pound girl has spent an entire point-to-point season in hopping aboard strange mounts—and winning with them.

She is 20-year-old Robin Riddick Hunt, and, gentlemen, she can ride a point-to-point course. For proof, look at the record for 1942: At Redland's meeting early in March, little Robin (who stands about as high as your shoulder) climbed on Mrs. Frank McSherry's Regiment, which she had barely met socially, and was a member of the victorious duo in the pair race.

At Potomac, Dr. Robert Moran gave her a leg up on his Metom, making his debut in racing, and the pair dashed over a 5-mile course in near-record time to win the Dunboyne Challage Cup—in faster time than the running of the featured Pink Coat Race over the same route.

At Piedmont, Robin had planned to ride Metom again but he did not round into anticipated condition so Oliver Durant 3d, asked her to ride his Red Sailor in the ladies' race, in such widely known competition as Mrs. Robert Winmill, Judy Johnson and other veterans.

Typical of racing luck, Red Sailor had a hard spill over the fifteenth post-and-rail fence on the long Rokeby course, sending Robin flying earthward. However, bystanders helped her remount and she made up a 200-yard deficit to win a la Hollywood, in the creditable time of 14:85 3-10.

Robin is not particularly fond of show ring riding, preferring the cross-country variety. Hence the Potomac Hunt's hunter trials Saturday were just to her liking as she rode Charles Carrico's Lois M., Dr. Moran's Metom, Taylor Chewning, jr.'s Locket, and several other strange horses in seven or eight successive trips over the 1¼-mile route—Robin lost count.

Now employed in the Treasury Department, she finds little time to ride these days but experiences no difficulty in keeping fit, as she seldom feels a stiff muscle from her widely separated outings.

But, with the help of wartime and long summer evenings, she plans to fare better in coming months so that she will be able to concentrate on her own 4-year-old, Shyrock, a daughter of her former point-to-point Mare, Cheyenna, winner of the Dunboyne Cup at Potomac in 1939 and 1940.

Shyrock, by St. Rock, has unusual speed and may carry her owner along to further racing victories. But even if she doesn't, a dozen local hunting men know exactly where they can find a reliable rider on short notice.

Simon, Fearing Brain Injury, Quits Boxing

mediately began negotiations to substitute Lee Savold, Iowa heavyweight, against Nova. Jacobs said, "The Navy show at Washington will be staged on May 21 if I have to go in and fight myself."

Simon retired with utmost reluctance. The Jewish giant said, "I'm completely disgusted. Here I am at 27—at my physical peak. I've fought Louis twice—taken his Sunday punches right on the button, and he didn't hurt me. Nobody can hurt me. Yet, they tell me I've got to retire, just when I'm in position at last to make some real money. I can't believe it, but I guess the doctor knows his business."

He was referring to Dr. S. Phillip Goodhart, a New York brain specialist, who is handling Simon's case.

Simon, who had 51 professional bouts since he started tossing leather seven years ago as the protege of a syndicate of wealthy club men, emphasized that today's move was not made because of any injuries suffered when knocked out in the sixth round by Joe Louis in his last fight on March 27.

Dr. Goodhart confirmed this. The doctor explained: "My decision to have Simon retire came after examining X-rays made several months ago. We will have new pictures taken shortly. I doubt that they will cause me to change my opinion."

Dr. Goodhart said it was unfortunate that unusually large men like Simon suffered two handicaps as pugilists: (1) Their size usually made them slow targets for head punches, and (2) certain head glands were more easily impaired than those of smaller men.

Meanwhile, well-spoken Simon is looking for a job—"at anything remunerative." His father is a butter and egg wholesaler, and his father-in-law is in the printing business. "I don't care for either," Big Abe says. "I want something with more action."

Wes Ferrell Happy As Manager, but Pines for Majors

We were playing the Yanks and had built up a 4-to-0 lead in the early innings, but in the seventh I got in trouble. A double, a walk and an error filled the bases and then Babe (Ruth) came up. I was nervous at first but then a feeling of certainty came over me. I struck out Ruth and Gehrig, Lazzeri sent a weak roller to the infield and we went on to win the game. The next time out I lost a 2-to-1 decision to Ted Lyons. That broke the string which I hoped would break the record. After that, I won seven straight."

Ferrell said Babe Ruth was "the greatest of them all." "And," he added, "the Babe ought to be managing or coaching for some big league outfit right today. He belongs in baseball." Mrs. Ferrell seconded the motion and recalled how fans stood up in praise of the mighty bambino when he attended games in the big time.

And speaking of managing, Joe McCarthy is the best in the game, according to Ferrell. Leo Durocher also rates high on his list as a manager.

and Ryba. They were off to a 1-0 lead in the first inning after Case beat out a hit to Tabor and raced to second on the third baseman's wild throw. With two out, Jake Early scored him with a single to right.

Wilson had a cruel break in the luck in the Red Sox's three-run third inning in which they made only one hit. That one occurred with two out. It was a slow roller by Pesky that hit second base and bounced out of Repass' reach. Dobson, who had walked, was on first at the time, and after a passed ball moved them up a base. Williams was given an intentional walk. Jimmy Foxx bounced a routine grounder to Estalella and when the Cuban threw into the dirt past Vernon, everybody except Foxx scored.

Rookie Bill Conroy bounced a Wilson pitch over the left field wall for a homer with two out in the fourth to set the Bostons up in a 4-1 lead, and then the Nats got tough. They scored the next nine runs of the ball game.

Homer Paces 5th

George Case led off the fifth with a homer over the wall in left and Spence followed with a single. Vernon was safe on Foxx's wild throw to second, and a bit later Early's long fly scored Spence from third to cut the Boston lead to 4-3. Estalella and Repass tied the score at 4-4 in a hurry in the sixth. They both doubled against the left field wall before Dobson could get anybody out. Gomez drew a walk and Wilson sacrificed. Case popped up for the second out, but Spence, who wasn't good enough to play regularly for the Red Sox last season, slammed a single to center that put the Nats in a 6-4 lead.

Wilson gave himself two more runs to work with in the seventh against Ryba. Campbell and Estalella slammed singles and Repass walked to fill the bases with one out. Gomez popped up harmlessly, but Wilson swatted a single to center to score two Nats.

In the ninth, Estelella and Repass got two quick runs for the Nats. Estelella walked and Repass, a weak-hitting member of the club until today, cow-tailed a pitch over the left field wall for a homer.

Wilson was never in serious trouble after the fourth. Thereafter he held the Sox to two hits to complete his five-hit job.

Wright Matched With Costantino

New York, April 20 (AP).—Matchmaker Bill Johnston announced tonight that Chalky Wright, Los Angeles Negro, recognized in New York State as world featherweight champion, and unbeaten Charley (Lulu) Costantino have been signed for a nontitle tilt at St. Nicholas Arena May 7.

The fight will be at 8 rounds.

Costantino, a local youngster, has been fighting as a professional for three years and has never been beaten in 55 trips to the post. In his most recent start he outpointed former batam and featherweight king, Harry Jeffra. Wright won the New York version of the 127-pound crown from Joey Archibald last fall. In recent months he has done all his campaigning in California.

Ohio State Nine Wins Over Kentucky, 1-5

Columbus, Ohio, April 20 (AP).—Ohio State University's baseball team made it five wins in a row by crushing the University of Kentucky, 10 to 5, today.

Working on rather weak pitchers, the Bucks scored six runs in the first inning and three in the second. Joe Mack, of Ohio, allowed the Kentuckians two hits in five innings and Art Maley struck out eight in his four innings to keep the visitors under control.

Long Virginia Trout Season Is Launched

Richmond, April 20 (AP).—The Virginia trout season opened today to continue through July 31.

It should be a good season this year for those who can get out to try their luck since commission officials said more than the usual number of fish had been distributed in some 178 stocked streams, and that a 25 per cent reduction in licenses was anticipated because of the war and tire rationing.

Weatherman Censorship Hits Farmers

Special Dispatch to The Post

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 20.—The science of forecasting weather and other natural hazards for fruit men, and advising them on the basis of that data as to their spraying and other cultivating schedules, has been complicated by the war, and has made at least one of the seasoned guides in this big producing belt even more cautious than ever.

E. C. Sherwood, plant pathologist, with the extension division of West Virginia University, who has been acting for a quarter of a century as the counsellor for the fruit men over a wide belt, told newspapermen when they asked him to estimate the approximate peak of the apple, peach, pear and cherry bloom—and the probably crop prospects beyond that stage—that he was worse than handicaped.

"I have no priority on tires," he said. "Consequently I have been compelled to reduce my own inspecting trips to typical orchards and conditions. More and more of my information must come from the orchard men whose judgment is good but, from my own professional standpoint, I would rather see for myself.

"Before the war we were able to get long-range weather forecasts, and chart temperature movements for our own use. A movement in the West could be plotted to estimate its arrival in this belt. Growers could be advised. With some advance knowledge of the temperature tides one could make a guess at what would prevail in bloom or other natural development in the fruit stock at a particular date. Now that has been ruled out. Forecasts are at best only for the day. By the time the newspaper predictions, for instance, reach us the time involved has usually passed. It makes predicting not only hazardous but almost hopeless."

The actual developments immediately after the time he spoke afforded a good demonstration of his thesis. It was a warm day when he was questioned.

"If the weather today were to continue, I might guess that the bloom peak for most of the fruit would be reached nexe week. But it may turn cold tonight—and that would delay the process effectively."

It did turn cool that night—there was frost—and some light damage to early bloom and bud swell was reported.

"You can guess as well as I under the circumstances," he told reporters. "I choose not to guess. I can give you the dates for previous years on the phases of crop preparation which you ask, but beyond that I can't go."

Bullet Long In Heart, but Sailor Lives

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, April 20.—An American sailor who carried a Japanese bullet in his heart for four months without knowing it was reported recovering today at a West Coast Naval hospital.

Naval surgeons at the same hospital recently removed a bomb fragment from the heart of another sailor now back on active duty.

Both were shot in the attack on Pearl Harbor December 7.

But Dean G. Darrow, 25, a native of Oconomowoc, Wis., didn't even know he was hurt. He was knocked out by a 30-30 machine gun bullet which ripped through his chest and buried itself in the muscles of his heart. When he regained consciousness he thought he had been nicked by a bullet, but found no wound and returned to active duty without even reporting for aid.

A routine transfer brought him back to the Pacific Coast with his ship. But every time he went up a ladder he found he was short of breath. Finally he complained to his medical officer.

An X-ray revealed the bullet in his heart. The bullet was removed last Friday. His condition was reported normal today.

The bomb fragment was taken from the heart of James B. Barker, 23, McLeanboro, Ill., who also didn't know it was there until doctors told him about it.

Barker was brought back as a hospital case December 26 because of wounds in his leg and shoulder. An X-ray at the hospital showed a ¾-inch by ½-inch fragment in the heart.

Opening lead: J ♣.

South, deftly handled the play, bringing in 12 tricks by using both of dummy's trumps to ruff, as well as taking four trump tricks in his hand. Had he played carelessly, he might have gone down, as West held five trumps including the queen.

The opening lead was the jack of clubs, which was taken by South's ace of clubs. The ace and king of spades were cashed and a low spade played to dummy. West threw off a small diamond, indicating that the heart nine was probably held by East. The spade was ruffed with dummy's heart three; the ace of diamonds was taken and a low club played to the queen. Another spade was led; West discarded a club and the dummy ruffed with the seven of hearts.

This was the situation:

The king of clubs was cashed and the good jack of spades thrown from declarer's hand. The eight of clubs was led and South trumped with the eight of hearts, allowing West to take the trump queen then or later. But as declarer's remaining hearts were all honors, it was the only trick the defenders could take.

Listen!

with Glynn

A half-hour of pleasant concert and operatic music, interspersed with some of the better popular favorites of the day, will be brought to you by some pretty superior voices in the new "American Melody Hour" series which makes its debut over WJSV and the Columbia network at 7:30 tonight.

(Please don't ask why it's called "The American Melody Hour" when it's only a half-hour long. Nobody has said.)

The singing stars will be Vivian della Chiesa, soprano, and Conrad Thibault, baritone. Another star will be Remo Bolognini, the South American violinist. And they'll all be accompanied by a concert orchestra and a large, mixed chorus.

Miss della Chiesa, who has been heard on any number of better musical programs within the past few years, came into her own back in 1934 when she won an "unknown singer" contest at Columbia's Chicago Station WBBM.

Thibault's voice is familiar not only to network listeners but to opera and concert hall listeners as well. He studied at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and later made his operatic debut with the Grand Opera Company of that city. Since then he's probably been heard as often on the air as any other baritone.

The selections on tonight's programs will include a medley of Rodgers and Hart tunes. "Here in My Arms," "Falling in Love With Love" and "My Romance." "El Relicario," "Just a Little Love," the Barcarolle, from "Tales of Hoffman," "Tell Me That You Love Me," "Home, Sweet Home" and America."

A daughter of the late Alfred and Eleanor Merryman Ray, of Forest Glen, Mrs. Wilson was a life-long resident of Montgomery County except about two years spent in Washington. She was the widow of J. Frank Wilson.

Worker Killed As Reservoir Hoist Breaks

William Kendrick, 20, of 4421 Ord Street Northeast, fell to his death yesterday about 1:45 p. m. when a boom hoist broke, knocking him from the top of a 40-foot cement silo, on which he was working, in the MacMillan Reservoir Grounds, First and Douglas Streets Northwest.

Kendrick was standing on the top of the silo, which is part of the filtration process at the reservoir, guiding the rope of a block and tackle used to lift 15 sacks of lime to the top of the structure.

Police said that the boom hoist broke. Kendrick was knocked from the silo but managed to cling momentarily to an iron ladder leading up the side of the structure. However, the backlash of the rope pulled his feet above his head and broke his grasp on the ladder, causing him to drop 40 feet to his death.

Harry L. Hutchings, a foreman, said that the block and tackle was a temporary affair. The regular contrivance for lifting the lime to the top of the silo is by use of a suction pipe, he stated. This, he said, broke down last week.

Kendrick was employed by the United States Engineer Department.

Army to Enroll Flying Students

Facing an imperative need for fliers, the Army Air Forces set out yesterday to enroll students in every college for future training.

The War Department announced a plan to enlist students as privates in a new Air Force Enlisted Reserve. They would be permitted to continue their studies but eventually would be called to active duty as aviation cadets at the air forces expand toward their announced goal of two million men.

Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Army air commander, urged the cooperation of educators in telegrams to more than 150 institutions chosen to serve as focal points for the undertaking.

Among the colleges named in the department's announcement are George Washington University and Georgetown University here.

Trade Group Favors A.I.U.

The Washington Board of Trade's executive committee, backing up earlier action by its traffic committee and a host of civic organizations, expressed opposition yesterday to the suggested abolition of the Police Department's Accident Investigation Unit and urged that it be strengthened instead.

"The committee is vigorously opposed to the abolition of the unit or to any weakening of its existing organization," announced Chairman Lanier P. McLachlen.

Executive committee members voted wholehearted indorsement of the traffic committee conclusion that enlargement of the staff and duties of the A. I. U. would aid considerably in reducing Washington's traffic problems.

"Any movement to do away with it is recognized as a definite step backward in the intelligent handling of traffic," the traffic committee had held.

Discontinuance of the unit as presently constituted has been proposed by a special investigating committee of three police officials but the District Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Council unanimously disapproved its recommendations April 9. The matter now awaits action of the Commissioners.

At the same meeting which saw action on the A. I. U., the Board of Trade's executive committee approved a recommendation of the board's traffic committee that the New Hampshire Avenue Bridge over the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad be named for the late Charles A. Langley, civic leader and honorary member of the board.

Mother Drexel to Get Welfare Award

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., April 20.—Mother M. Katherine Drexel, daughter of a prominent and wealthy Philadelphia family, who devoted her life to the religious education and welfare of the Negroes and Indians, will be presented the annual award of the Catholic Committee of the South at a special ceremony at the three-day convention of the committee next week.

The presentation ceremony will take place at 11:30 a. m. next Tuesday.

Mother Drexel, who is 82 years old and still active in her work, founded the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament for Indians and Negroes 51 years ago. The congregation now numbers 460 sisters who work in 36 missions located in 18 States.

Mother Drexel is the daughter of the late Francis A. Drexel, one of Philadelphia's leading financiers and philanthropists and a former partner of J. P. Morgan. The motherhouse of the order she founded is located at Cornwells Heights, Pa., in the former country place of her father.

The C. C. S. plaque is presented annually to a person, regardless of race or creed, who has made a significant contribution to the welfare and progress of the South. The recipient last year was Dr. George Washington Carver, Negro scientist and director of the George Washington Carver Research Foundation at Tuskegee Institute.

The presentation next week will be made by the Most Rev. Peter L. Ireton, D. D., coadjutor Boshop of Richmond.

The annual convention of the Catholic Committee of the South will start Sunday morning with the solemn religious opening and continue through Tuesday night, with the annual banquet the closing feature.
